With summer zing comes wasp's sting

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

If you think there have been more wasps, bees, yellow jackets, hornets or other kinds of stinging pests around this summer, you're right.

The victims, as well as hospital emergency staffs, are painfully aware just how bad the problem is.

If you've never been bitten, one victim's description of his own encounter with wasps might give you an inkling of what it's like.

"It was like someone tightening a red-hot piece of barbed wire around my leg," said the man, stung four times in the ankle.

In the vast majority of cases, the sting hurts and the subsequent swelling is painful, but ultimately, it all goes away.

In some cases, however, particularly if there has been an earlier encounter with the angry insects, the consequences of stings can be severe.

Hospital emergency staffs are unanimous in warning of the danger of being stung in the area of the throat, where swelling can constrict breathing passages. In these cases, it's best to seek medical help.

For most of us, however, a dose of antihistamine, available at your neighborhood drugstore, is enough to counter the effects of a sting reaction.

Cold compresses or soaking the sting area in cold water will help ease the pain. An excellent first-aid treatment is a paste made of water and meat tenderizer (baking soda will also do) applied to the sting area.

That takes care of the sting. The obvious question is, where are all the pests coming from?

One thing is certain, the hot, dry weather in the spring certainly helped put the sting into summer. And if the hot weather continues into an Indian summer, then the wasps will stay.

According to Dr. R. D. Akre, an entomologist at Washington State University, during the warm months the queen wasp builds her nest, lays eggs and feeds larvae as she goes. If it is cold, most eggs die, but the warm weather has improved the survival rate this year.

Those survivors appear to have a fair scoring record and health officials here and throughout B.C. report higher-than-normal numbers of persons being treated for wasp stings.

Dr. G. G. Skidder, a University of B.C. entomologist, says the best treatment is prevention — wasps won't attack unless they're provoked.

Persons should not move suddenly when in the company of a wasp and should not try to swat them. Anyone trying to move a wasp's nest should cover his face, arms and legs to prevent a sting, he said.

Swath of demolished homes, smashed cars, broken trees shows path of tornado

Tornado ravages Ontario

Times News Services

WOODSTOCK, Ont. — A tornado funnel that ripped across southwestern Ontario as dusk fell Tuesday left residents sorting through the remains of their homes in the midst of incredible devastation today.

Provincial police said that one man was killed in the Woodstock area and a woman was killed and another person was missing in the Brantford area.

William Snyder, 51, of Norwich, was killed while driving his van along a country road southeast of Woodstock. Police said the van was lifted by the wind, had its roof ripped off, and was thrown into a field.

Corrie Rykeson, 33, of Harley, in the southwest corner of Brant County, died when the tornado hit her farm home. Her nine-year-old daughter, Annita, was injured and admitted to hospital.

The Woodstock district was officially declared a disaster area today by the provincial cabinet, making the area eligible for financial aid.

Requests from the area and the extent of provincial help required were to be discussed further when government officials had completed an examination of the destruction.

Premier William Davis said a co-ordinator will be appointed for the area to direct provincial services being provided and to speed up aid from the province.

The destruction started when two twisters ripped into the county at about 7 p.m. Tuesday.

A large one split up at Tavistock, north of Woodstock, and swung in a southeasterly direction toward the community of Bright. The more powerful of the two went through the southwest end of Woodstock, through the community of Oxford Centre and then curved around New Durham.

Provincial police said damages could run well into the millions of dollars depending on how much damage was done to three manufacturing plants that were hard hit by the twister.

City to lose met station

The regional climate data centre which has operated out of Victoria's Gonzales Observatory for more than half a century is to be moved to the new federal environment services headquarters in Marpole.

The key function of the weather station will be transferred this fall, the Times has learned.

The move is scheduled to be completed by Oct. 1 and the facility will be closed to the public.

Weathermen feel the switch will mean a severe interruption in some weather records which have been maintained continuously since the station opened in 1914.

Information such as the number of sunshine hours and wind gust data will no longer be kept on a seven-day a week basis.

In addition, the station, a prime tourist spot noted for its panoramic view of Greater Victoria, will no longer be open to the public after the move is made.

Brian Small, manager of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said he was saddened by the loss.

"Gonzales is a traditional landmark in the community. Some good community use should be found for it to keep it open."

The relocation of the data centre has been talked about by the federal government for years.

However, Defence Minister Allan McKinnon and Conservative MP Don Munro both voiced opposition to the move whenever the matter was raised in the House of Commons.

Neither McKinnon nor Munro was available for comment this morning.

A spokesman for the weather service said the information gathered at the centre — it compiles all climatological reports in the province — is being computerized. The computer is located in Vancouver.

Up to now all of the reports have been processed manually.

The spokesman said the government rejected a proposal to install a computer terminal at Gonzales because it would have been too costly.

The reduction in staff at the station will impair the local weather observing program, the spokesman said.

Both sunshine hours and wind gust information are recorded on discs which have to be changed every 24

BCRIC sales brisk

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians sent their new company into the public stock trading lists in fine fashion Tuesday and today was even better. Shares were trading at 11 a.m. today at $6.50.

The long-awaited first day of trading in B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) shares kept Vancouver Stock Exchange staff, floor traders and brokers busy throughout the day.

Trading in BCRIC shares started today on the Toronto Stock Exchange, but because there are virtually no sellers of shares outside B.C., trading volume there will depend on how much buying interest there is.

At the closing bell, 587,984 shares had changed hands, opening at $6⅛, the high for the day, dipping to a low of $5⅞, and closing at $6.10.

The only discordant note came in a noon-hour demonstration by about 30 native Indians who arrived at the exchange, beating a drum, chanting Indian songs and carrying placards.

They were protesting trading in BCRIC shares, which they said is a giveaway of resources that rightfully belong to Indians.

Massive Etna blast feared as gas mounts

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) - Scientists said today dangerous gas pressures are building up inside Mount Etna and the volcano, which has been erupting for the past five days and blackened beaches with its ash, could explode at any time.

The warning came from a team of experts, led by volcanologist Haroun Tazieff of Belgium, that has been studying the 3,250-metre mountain since it began its most spectacular eruption in 20 years last Friday.

"So far the eruption has continued without the escape of the gases inside Etna," Tazieff told reporters. "This mass of trapped gas could open new craters on the slopes of the volcano or perhaps cause a violent explosion."

The volcano, Europe's mightiest and most tempestuous, was spewing lava from three separate craters, two of them near the summit and one lower down the slopes above the evacuated village of Fornazzo.

Lava reached to within 90 metres of Fornazzo Tuesday but scientists said the front of the lava flow had solidified and molten lava was about 3 kilometres from the village today.

Though the village appeared out of immediate danger, officials said the lava so far had destroyed about 1,024 acres of apple, nut and olive orchards that provide a livelihood for its residents.

"This eruption is the most unusual we've seen since we've had modern instruments to study Etna," Tazieff said. "It's behavior makes it impossible to make any predictions."

The latest activity of the volcano, which has killed 1 million people in its 2,400 years of recorded history, is puzzling experts.

Strike may cut ferries

The B.C. Ferries Corp. will have to begin cancelling sailings if it is unable to get more diesel fuel by Friday, a spokesman for the Crown corporation said today.

Information officer Betty Nicholson said the ferries have been kept running to this point in a strike by truck drivers employed by three major oil companies on fuel supplied by Shell.

However, Shell, not directly involved in the contract dispute with the Teamsters union, has told the corporation the company can't promise any more fuel.

Nicholson said the ferry corporation is now attempting to line up deliveries from its usual suppliers — the three struck companies, Gulf, Chevron and Imperial.

If more supplies are arranged, she said, no ferry cancellations will be necessary.

The corporation is concerned that if the struck companies attempt to deliver their product to the terminals, the teamsters will picket and shut down the ferry operation completely.

In an effort to stave off this possibility, Nicholson said the corporation will apply to the Labor Relations Board on Thursday for an order preventing any picketing of ferry operations.

She said the application will be made on the basis

Cancer trace rocks scotch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tiny traces of cancer-causing agents have been found by researchers in six brands of scotch whisky, the U.S. National Science Foundation says. The agents, called nitrosamines, apparently form while barley malt is drying.

But an industry group responded to the report Tuesday by saying the researchers' measurements differ from those of the World Health Association and "this may raise questions about the accuracy."

The scotches found to contain nitrosamines are Chivas Regal, Black and White, JB, Ballantine, Sandy Scot and Cutty Sark. No nitrosamines were found in White Label. Those were the only brands tested.

Nitrosamines have caused cancer in laboratory animals. Scientists say that, while there is no direct evidence they produce cancer in humans, nitrosamines should be considered as though they did.

Meanwhile, Dr. Perce McKinley, director-general of Canada's health protection branch, says minute traces of cancer-causing agents found in Canadian brands of beer do not create a serious health hazard.

Tradesmen want more

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of forest industry tradesmen is trying to re-open contract negotiations even though master agreements between forest companies and the two biggest unions have been signed.

The group, calling itself the B.C. Forest Industry Tradesmen's Association and claiming 5,000 members in three unions, said Tuesday it will hold a 24-hour study session Friday to press its demands for higher wage revisions for tradesmen.

But Don Saunders, chairman of Forest Industrial Relations Ltd. and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau which negotiate on behalf of forest products companies, said: "The industry has no intention of re-opening the agreements. Industry negotiations have been concluded with the three unions."

Mair releases Shaffer report

Environment Minister Rafe Mair released Tuesday a report critical of the proposed Cheekye-Dunsmuir power transmission line to Vancouver Island from the Sechelt Peninsula but said the government plans to go ahead with the project anyway.

During the last session of the legislature, Mair said the report by economist Marvin Shaffer didn't exist.

Later he acknowledged its existence but said the government wouldn't pay for it. Now he says the government will ignore it.

The report disputes a claim by B.C. Hydro that the 500-kilovolt transmission line to Vancouver Island is the most economic alternative to supplying power to its customers there.

Shaffer says more studies should be carried out before a decision on the project is made and suggests Hydro studies overestimated future electricity needs in the area for both commercial and residential customers.

Mair said he doesn't mean to demean the report but there are as many opinions as there are experts on matters of this kind.

The minister said the power is needed and the government will go ahead with plans to build the line as negotiations will continue with local residents on its route.

In Vancouver, Hydro announced that a $235 million contract for the supply and installation of underwater electric power cables for the line has been awarded to two European companies.

Hydro said that Industrie Pirellia of Italy and Standard Telefon Kabelfabrik of Norway will handle the project.

The circuit, including substations, will cost an estimated $406 million and the project is necessary, Hydro said in a news release, because of possible future power shortages on Vancouver Island.

The contract is the largest single supply and installation agreement ever awarded by Hydro.

Pipeline explosion kills four

VERCELLI, Italy (UPI) — A leaking crude oil pipeline exploded late Tuesday night, killing four persons, including a 10-year-old boy, and spilling thousands of gallons of oil into the Po River, authorities said.

Officials in the northwestern Italian city today said the explosion came after a workman digging a hole with a mechanical dredger split open the 18-inch pipe, allowing the oil to leak out uncontrolled for several hours.

As pipeline experts tried to stop the flow during the night, the officials said, the work site exploded into flames, hurling debris up to 300 yards in all directions.

The pipeline, buried three and a half feet underground, is operated by the Italian company SNAM to move crude oil from Mediterranean ports to Switzerland.

By this morning, officials said, the flow of oil through the pipe had been halted by automatic valves and clean-up operations were under way to limit the ecological damage to Po River fisheries.

Officials blamed the fire on arsonists. They said it was not yet known whether any foreigners were among the dead, who included 11 men, five women, and six children.

The blaze was still raging early today as firemen backed up by soldiers and water-spraying planes tried to stop it reaching villas scattered throughout the woods around Lloret de Mar.

Fanned by high winds, the fire spread quickly, engulfing eight small villas and trapping some of the fleeing vacationers.

Officials said the bodies were so charred that identification was impossible. One injured Briton, listed as Robert Morley, 47, was severely burned as he tried to save personal possessions from his vacation bungalow.

The president of the provincial council said the blaze was almost certainly started by arsonists as it broke out simultaneously at three points several kilometres apart.

Witnesses said 13 of the dead were found huddled together in a dry river bed where they had apparently sought refuge.

Lloret de Mar, a seaside town whose 10,000 population swells to more than 140,000 during the peak summer holiday season, is a popular resort for French, West German, British and Scandinavian tourists.

Forestry officials said the blaze destroyed about 2,400 acres of pines.

Spain's eastern coast has been hit by several forest fires during the last few months and forestry officials have blamed arsonists.

Josep Tarradellas, the 80-year-old president of Catalonia's provisional autonomous administration, said he was disgusted by "such a crime."

Author Monsarrat dies in U.K. at 69

LONDON (AP) — Novelist Nicholas Monsarrat, author of The Cruel Sea and other works on nautical themes, died in hospital here today of cancer. He was 69.

His agent, John McLaughlin, said the author entered hospital 10 days ago after travelling from Gozo, Malta, where he had lived for about seven years.

Born in England and educated at Cambridge University, Monsarrat was director of the British Information Office in Johannesburg, South Africa, when he wrote The Cruel Sea.

Although the book was almost an instant success, Monsarrat continued to work for the information agency and directed its office in Ottawa from 1953 to 1956.

His other books include The Kappillan of Malta and The Master Mariner, which was published last year.

Actor Jimmy Stewart and wife Gloria celebrate their 30th anniversary this week

After believing for nearly five years he was dying of leukemia, Harry Perry has found out he's okay after all. In the meantime, he has paid out thousands of dollars in chemotherapy treatments, quit his job as an automobile parts manager and lived alone drinking heavily and feeling depressed and lonely. Now relieved — but more than a little bitter — the 53-year-old Chicagoan has filed a $200,000 suit against the doctor and the hospital who misdiagnosed his condition in 1974. Perry recently remarried and says he feels great.

Hollywood, which mourned John Wayne by saying there would never be another like him, now is trying to find two more just like him. ABC and CBS both have bought three-hour dramatized television biographies of the superstar and the hunt is on for actors to play Wayne. The ABC project, The Duke, will be produced by Batjac Productions, which was Wayne's own company and now is presided over by his son, Michael, who will serve as producer. The CBS version, Shooting Star and produced by Warner Bros., will begin shooting in September.

Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, 75, is scheduled to return home to Montreal today after 12 years working with lepers and handicapped children in the West African country of Cameroon.

Mia Farrow, a familiar face to British theatregoers, will make her Broadway debut this fall, co-starring with Anthony Perkins in Bernard Slade's new play Romantic Comedy.

Mexico today celebrates the 100th birthday of Emiliano Zapata, its legendary revolutionary general, but Zapata's son Mateo Emiliano Zapata won't let his father's body be moved to a Mexico City monument because he says the peasants Zapata rallied with the cry "land and liberty" are still oppressed.

Soyaya Khashoggi, wife of Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi has filed a breach-of-contract suit against him in Los Angeles seeking $2 billion she claims he owes her from his business interests.

NBC has hired David Frost — the man who paid Richard Nixon more than $600,000 for a series of TV interviews — to quiz former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger on a special one-hour program on American foreign policy Oct. 11.

David Wolper, the producer of Roots, has quit a CBS project to protest against the casting of pro-Palestinian actress Vanessa Redgrave as a Nazi concentration camp survivor in the play Fania Fenelon.

Charles W. Ponsler of Indianapolis went to bat for his children Carole, 13, and Paul, 10, after they were scratched from Little League baseball because they failed to sell their quota of candy during a league fund-raiser. But the suit was dismissed on the grounds the non-profit Edgewood Athletic Association could require any fee or standard for membership "barring illegality or discrimination by race or sex."

Dead sparrow headlines

The distressed rector, Rev. Robin Clark, asked the congregation to leave, summoned a person with an air gun, and had the errant bird shot down.

One young woman fled in tears when news spread about what had been done and some villagers lodged a protest with the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

The tabloid Daily Mirror devoted its only editorial today to the sparrow's demise. It declared: "Mr. Clark had better be very careful before he orders the shooting of anything else flying round over the high altar. You never know, vicar. The next one might be carrying a harp."

It could only happen in Britain where national newspapers today gave front-page prominence to the death of a sparrow.

"Elegy in a Country Church Roof," said one headline, recalling Thomas Gray's Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard.

The story began Tuesday when a chirpy sparrow got itself trapped in the rafters of St. Helens Parish Church at Brant Broughton, a village of 500 in central England.

Unfortunately, it chose the wrong moment to call for help. It began twittering just as a guitar recital was about to begin — classical guitarist Konrad Ragossnig was recording it for BBC Radio.

Iranian soldiers defy officers

TEHRAN (AP) — Army officers and enlisted men clashed with revolutionary guards in northwestern Orumiyeh to protest against the execution of an army colonel and an army sergeant, and an undetermined number of persons were wounded by gunfire, press reports said today.

The colonel and sergeant were convicted by a revolutionary court of complicity in the murder of protestors during demonstrations against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, whose regime was ousted in February.

Mohammad Haghu, governor-general of West Azerbaijan province, of which Orumiyeh is the capital, blamed the strife on the revolutionary court.

He said the court president, who was reported to have fled the city fearing for his safety, was "an inexperienced youth of 25 who took things into his own hands and hurried the executions," the official news agency Pars reported.

In other developments:

— A prominent Tehran businessman, Ahmad Lajevardi, president of the Behshahr industrial group, was shot and critically wounded by two unknown men who shot him in the back as he drove to work.

— Khomeini issued an appeal on state radio, asking Iranian workers to end strikes and sit-ins so that the battered economy can be improved.

— Revolutionary firing squads executed four more men in three cities today, including Orumiyeh, raising the total put to death by Khomeini's special courts to 389 since the February revolution.

Defusing the bomb

The Malthusian nightmare of a world filled with too many people, exhausting supplies of food and necessary resources, seems to have receded. The widely feared "population explosion" appears farther off than at any time in the recent past.

The United Nations journal Populi reports from a recent conference on population trends that birth rates and fertility levels have suddenly gone into decline around the world.

Actual population figures will continue to go up, but the rate at which the population is increasing has slowed dramatically. One conference participant called this relatively recent development "an amazing turnabout in the world's demographic fortunes."

Birth rates in the U.S. and industrialized nations of Europe have been dropping for some time, but according to the statisticians and the surprise of the forecasters, the trend has not stopped at a "replacement plateau" but is continuing downward to the point where some nations (such as West Germany) are actually facing a real decrease in population. They have started to encourage families to have more children.

Even in parts of the world which have recorded explosively high fertility rates — Asia, Latin America and North Africa — the decline is noticeable. It is also true of areas where there are only sketchy birth control programs. Large numbers of women in Bangladesh, South Korea and Colombia, for example, said in a survey that two children were enough.

The statistics omit significant countries like China and the USSR for want of detailed information, but even here the best estimates of population growth suggest a similar decline is under way.

Why is this happening? Many tentative theories were proposed at the conference — people putting off marriage until they are older, the increasing divorce rate, dissolution of religious authority and strictures, cheap and easy methods of contraception, a lesser physical need for children as families migrate from farms to the cities.

But the experts believe something more is involved. "Clearly, we have not yet sufficiently understood the psychological factors that influence human reproduction," said UN demographer Leon Tabah.

Dr. Jonas Salk, the developer of polio vaccine, tentatively suggested the guiding hand is "an evolutionary imperative." Near the point of crisis, man's intelligence makes him aware of the danger and he exercises his free will, choosing to limit his numbers in preference to disaster through overpopulation.

Whatever its causes, the defusing of the population bomb hasn't come too soon. By the end of the century, there will still be at least six billion people on the planet, even by the most conservative estimates. We may have avoided imminent catastrophe, but the problems associated with population will continue to be severe.

A declining birth rate and rising life expectancy will change the nature of the world's population. The numbers of elderly people will greatly increase.

One expert sees families with members representing four and five generations becoming more common — a couple in their 40s or 50s supporting dependent younger and older family members with their ages spanning perhaps eight or nine decades.

The challenges associated with the changing character of the world's population probably will demand even greater ingenuity, inspiration and sacrifice than slowing the juggernaut itself. With hard work and some luck, the genus homo sapiens may yet prosper well into the next millenium.

Jimmy Carter gets a freebie

WASHINGTON — The photographs of Jimmy Carter sprawled atop the presidential limousine, shaking hands with some of the 7,000 people who engulfed him last week in Bardstown, Ky., had a clear meaning to Bill Brock, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

To Brock, the photographs and news articles portrayed Carter as campaigning for re-election. Worse yet, from his viewpoint, the campaigning was being done at taxpayers' expense.

"It was clearly political," Brock said in a telephone interview. "Trips that are overtly political are simply not allowed under the law and should be funded by the Democratic National Committee."

Just presidential

But to John C. White, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Carter was simply being presidential. The purpose of the trip, White said, was to expose Carter to the perspective of rural America and to enlist support for presidential policies and programs.

"If the president became a White House recluse, Bill would be criticizing him for not going out and finding out what people thought," he said.

The nine-hour visit to rural Kentucky, totally financed by the taxpayers, is the kind of trip that will figure more frequently in Carter's schedule. He announced on Thursday that he would visit Baltimore this week, and two more journeys are expected before Labor Day.

The debate over how to separate government from politics, and divide the costs between the official and political portions of a presidential trip, is not new to Washington. Four years ago some Democrats criticized President Ford for doing precisely what President Carter is now doing.

In September, 1975, Robert S. Strauss, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now a key presidential adviser, assailed Ford for not using his election campaign funds for presidential trips in which Ford denounced the Democrats and otherwise acted very much like a candidate. Some of those trips were financed by the Republican National Committee, which spent a total of $309,000 on presidential trips up to that date.

The Federal Election Commission handed down an advisory opinion holding, in effect, that the presidential campaign did not begin until 1976, the campaign year. Until then, the commission said, it would tend to take the president's own estimate of whether a trip was presidential or political. Unless a president blatantly campaigned in this period, it said, the trip would be considered nonpolitical.

To date, the Carter-Mondale election committee has, according to committee officials, spent $551,000 on fundraising trips by Vice President Mondale, Rosalynn Carter and four White House aides — Stuart E. Eizenstat, Anne Wexler, Jody Powell and Timothy E. Kraft. The group has thus far provided no money for trips by Carter, who is not an announced candidate for re-election.

The Democratic National Committee has thus far furnished only $4,000 for presidential travel, covering its share of a trip to New Hampshire, where Carter addressed a party fundraising affair, according to committee officials. Carter's appearances at other fundraising dinners in Wisconsin, Indiana and Virginia were paid for by state and local Democratic organizations, the officials said.

It is congress, in the legislation authorizing the appropriation of funds for presidential use, that limits that money to official purposes, including, by general acknowledgment, the use of funds to generate political support for the president's policies and programs.

The election commission has formulated rules on how to divide costs between the political and official portions of a trip. These rules specify that the funds are prorated according to the actual time that the president spends at events, and does not include travel time or time spent resting or socializing.

Consider a hypothetical trip at which the president spent an hour at a regional news conference, two hours at a dinner at which he spoke to a civic group, an hour at a party fund-raiser and an hour at a re-election rally. One-fifth of the cost of the trip would be borne by his campaign committee, one-fifth by the party and three-fifths by the taxpayers, according to the rules.

Can't sort it out

This year, Carter enjoys the political advantage of being able to travel virtually anywhere at no expense to his re-election campaign, which will have an estimated legal limit of $18 million at its disposal. This includes $14 million, plus an exemption of $2.8 million for the cost of fund-raising, and an additional exemption for legal and accounting costs for compliance with election commission regulations.

In 1976, Ronald Reagan, Ford's rival for the Republican presidential nomination, complained that he had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in travel expenses from which the incumbent president was exempt.

Powell, the White House press secretary, pointed out that the Bardstown trip involved no party fundraising affairs and no campaigning for Democratic candidates. He remarked that the tumultuous reception received by Carter was by no means unusual. If such visits constitute campaigning, he said, then the campaigning began early in 1977, when Carter began his presidential travels.

"How do you sort out presidential business from political campaigning?" Powell asked. "The only way to do it is to go by the rules that have been set up."

BRUCE HUTCHISON

A maple for a memorial

The life of the maple tree was not long as trees go, less than a century. But it had used that time well. Its trunk was nearly three feet thick and sheathed in green moss like the fur of an animal, the diameter of its foliage perhaps 75 feet, its shade a pleasant retreat from the summer sun.

Under the autumn rains each of its broad leaves sounded like a tiny kettle drum. In the winter its black tangle of naked branches against a windy sky might have been a model for the intricate groining of a gothic cathedral. Its swelling buds were the first sure intimation of spring in the Pacific coast jungle.

From its infancy the maple had observed much human life, some good days, some bad, and in the worst of them it brought comfort to the man who planted it. Its annual growth rings, if you could read them, must have recorded a strange story, the memories of young laughter and old sorrow. The lives of the planter and his maple were silently joined until the end.

Come from Ontario

Roderick Graham came back from Europe and the trenches of a world war in 1919. He was then 28 years of age, a short, thin man but sinewy, brisk as a terrier and always cheerful. He seldom mentioned the war and only a crooked white scar across his ruddy cheek reminded us (who were kids then) that he had been wounded.

Everybody called him Rod and we gradually learned that he was raised on a farm in Ontario, his folk Scottish, thrifty and well to do. But in the war he had met some fellows from Vancouver Island, they told him it was a good place to live and he decided to have a farm of his own there.

With the help of a veteran's bonus and a minor pension, Rod bought a hundred acres. Most of them were covered by virgin timber of a size never seen in Ontario. To clear even the first acre of fir, cedar, hemlock, alder and maple was a mighty task. Rod sold the largest trees to a gyppo logging outfit and after it had taken the logs away he burned the slash in huge winter fires.

By this time he had built a neat log cabin close to a chattering stream, for he was expert with axe and saw, and acquired a buckskin mare called Ginger that pulled a shallow plow to break ground for a crop of vegetables. Rod planted them near the cabin and also a maple sapling about three feet high, dug from the woods, and he wondered if it would grow.

It grew, and so did Rod's household. According to plans already made in Ontario, a woman of his age, named Mary, with a face not beautiful but strong and serene, arrived at the village and was married to Rod by the local magistrate.

Their life moved smoothly. The cabin was enlarged with three successive additions. The engine of an old Model T pumped water from the stream and sometimes produced electricity when it was in the right mood. Ginger was superannuated in the meadow and a second-hand tractor replaced her.

Every winter a few more acres were cleared, the resinous stumps of the gigantic conifers left to rot in a century or so. Rod was a patient man. And when we returned to the woods one spring there was a baby boy in a home-made crib under the shade of the maple. He had been given his father's name and seemed to grow as fast as the tree.

This was a home of contentment and quiet victory over the jungle, supported by the little farm, some work on the public roads and odd jobs of carpentry or plumbing for the neighbors. Rod's wife bottled grouse, venison, mushrooms and wild blackberries for meals better than any king was likely to eat. She milked a fat Jersey cow, churned butter and traded it at the village store and even made her own soap.

The maple grew so high that its branches arched the cabin roof and we carved our initials in its soft, juicy bark.

All was well on the farm until the second Rod, now a giant youth in the Vancouver university, went to another world war and soon a telegram, phoned to the village, announced his death in battle.

After that news Rod never cleared any more land, never talked about his son, went about his work in silence and watched his wife slowly sicken. The doctor thought he recognized some organic disease, but we knew better.

When she died Rod followed her two years later. A heart attack, the doctor said, and in a way, we guessed, it was. Rod's ashes were buried beside Mary's under the vast spread of the maple.

Nobody wanted the farm. Weeds and brambles surged up around the cabin. Kids broke most of the windows with stones and air guns. Then, a couple of years ago, a prosperous lawyer from Victoria bought the place from owners unknown to us, repaired it and made a jolly summer home for a numerous family. His children and their friends played on a swing hung from the maple's lowest branch, unaware of the earth's contents beneath them. Rod would have liked to hear their shouts and laughter, and see again the tree he had planted when he was young.

Crashed down in a gale

But last winter, as if it could no longer live without him, the maple crashed down in a gale, alone and unseen, wrecking one wing of the cabin. The new owner hired carpenters to fix the damage and the maple was cut up for firewood.

A man of sound instincts, he remembered something else, too. Returning to the woods in the spring, we found a frail sapling planted beside the original stump. The second maple, perhaps a seed child of the first, is growing fine and should be four feet high by autumn. Rod would approve it.

Church and state

May I comment through your columns on several church-state issues which have received public attention recently, and should be of interest and concern to many Canadians.

☐ First, Labor Minister Allan Williams is to be commended for appealing to the B.C. supreme court at least one part of a ruling by a human rights board of inquiry that a Catholic high school did not contravene the B.C. human rights code when it fired one of its teachers, Margaret Caldwell, because she married a divorced Protestant.

Canadians United for Separation of Church and State maintain that private parochial schools have the right to hire only those individuals who actively support their philosophy or religious teachings as long as the schools are privately funded.

Once they receive private funding, however, they sacrifice that freedom. And that is the case with St. Thomas Aquinas. Under no circumstances should the school be allowed to hire and fire individuals on a religious basis when it is receiving public funds.

☐ Second, I see no serious reason why the request of Langley's Trinity Western College to grant degrees to should not be granted by the B.C. legislature or the universities council. Trinity is obviously a religious institution. Its brochures state it offers training for "Frontline Christian Leaders." As long as the college is funded privately and meets the academic standards of a government accrediting body, it should be allowed to grant degrees.

Instructors at Trinity Western should have little difficulty in objectively teaching current scholarly theories about the material universe while still retaining their fundamentalist views about God and His creation. Anyone thoroughly versed in Greek mythology can readily teach it to others; the instructor doesn't have to believe in it as a way of life.

☐ Third, and ironically also centered in Langley, is the controversial question of the Judeo-Christian value schools established in the public school system. Our organization seriously questions why a public school should be allowed to admit students on a religious basis. Certainly many of us want to engender within our children a love of God and His government of the universe, but we have to do that through the home and our own church.

Under no circumstances should our public schools be turning away students because of unwillingness to accept "Judeo-Christian values." Public schools must remain open to students of all religious persuasions or no persuasion. We all can unite on a common humanity. And that doesn't have to be godless.

☐ Fourth, Attorney-General Garde Gardom should assure the public his department is not secretly investigating any religious group, large or small. Reports have circulated in the media that some small groups such as the Unification Church, Hare Krishna, the Church of Scientology, Transcendental Meditation and perhaps Campus Crusade for Christ were to be investigated for suspicious activities.

Perhaps this is a backlash to the Jonestown affair in Guyana. Perhaps it is a spillover from Ontario and its fears of some small church groups. No doubt we all have concerns about relatives, friends and others beng seduced by questionable groups. We need to remember though that every group is questionable to at least someone. Dissidents can be found from every organization ever established.

If there are criminal or illegal practices, these should be examined openly through the courts or other agencies established to handle such cases.

☐ Finally, may we urge the B.C. government to get itself out of the church-state quicksand it has unwittingly stepped into with its public funding of private and parochial schools. Repeal of this legislation will have to come eventually. The sooner the better for both church and state. — Ian Bruce Kelsey, President, Canadians United for Separation of Church and State, 4070 West 37th Avenue, Vancouver.

Kersplash!

Re: the question of patrols for Saanich beach parties: some years ago I read an article in Reader's Digest which, if it was implemented, might help.

It seems that in Virginia, a once clean, sandy-bottomed creek, a favorite spot for bathing and picnics, was being polluted with tin cans, broken bottles and other rubbish by visiting vacationers.

To correct this state of affairs the "village fathers" enlisted the aid of the younger folk of this same village. And soon a tin can or bottle thrower found himself propelled unceremoniously kersplash into the creek to retrieve said rubbish.

It is reported that within one summer the idea of trash into trash cans and a resulting clean beach and bathing spot got across to the general public.

Small, beautiful better for Britain

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

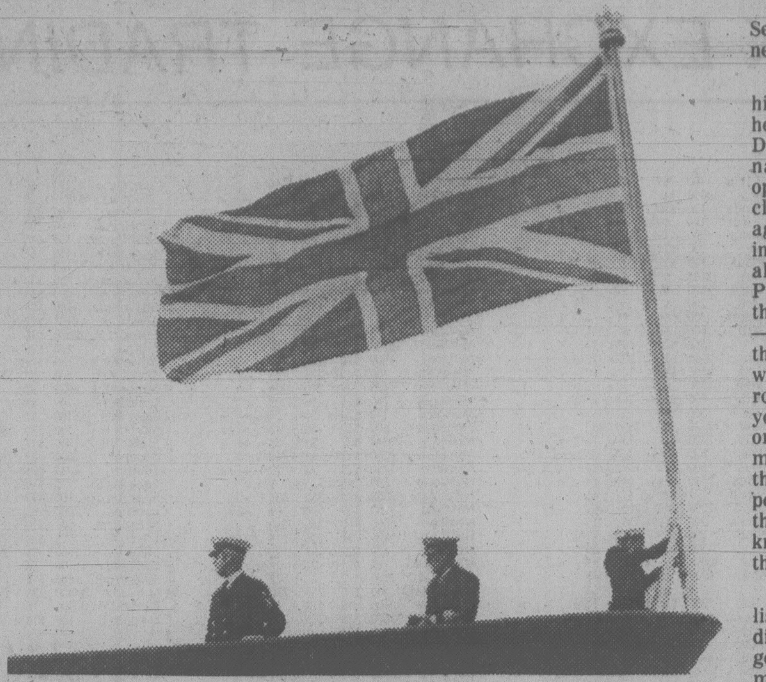
Lately, due to the change of government, the fact of a female prime minister and the vague moral imperative of democracy, I have been trying very hard to understand Conservatives, upper and lower case. They are, after all, human, I say to myself. If you prick them, do they not bleed? And they are, you must admit, frightfully patriotic. As they keep on saying, they want to put the Great back into Britain.

Aye, but there's the rub, there's where I and, perhaps, a number of other people cannot help but part company with them. Though I am perfectly content to be British, I have no desire at all to be Great British. Indeed, if it isn't too contradictory, I happen to think that not being Great British is greater than being Great British. Have you noticed that saying Great frequently enough turns the word to ashes in your mouth?

Conservatives have short and highly selective memories. They also believe in fairy tales. They think, for instance, that there were good old days when all Briton loved God, King and Country, chose noble Statesmen instead of ignoble politicians, possessed Hearts of Oak, and showed a united front which enabled them to win wars, rule the seas and run the world. That, of course, was Great Britain.

Now, at least once a month in some newspaper or magazine somewhere upon this still-sceptred isle someone laments our current state, wailing of "the sour society," the "politics of envy," our divisiveness, our lack of purpose, our laziness, our inability to produce Statesmen, and our general loss of faith in God, the Monarchy, and Great Britain. Worst of all, according to them, we share no common bond, as we did in the War. In other words, Britons are falling apart and this may mean the end of civilization as we know it.

In fact, it could mean the beginning of civilization as we've never known it if you assume, as I do, that no country can be defined as truly civilized until it is actively democratic. The main reason for the calm, prosperity and unity of "the good old days" was that all those people who were not calm, prosperous, or unified had no education, no leisure, no money, no power, no vote, and therefore no voice. Whatever their mutterings, whatever the polar regions of their discontent, they went unheard and so could be said not to exist. Only one point of view defined the Greatness of Britain; democracy was confined to the panoply of Parliament and an occasional member of the deserving poor was trotted out to pull his forelock, say "God bless 'ee, squire," and quash all doubts.



Rural democracy, the extra Parliamentary kind, is much nosier. When almost everyone has a voice and uses it, the resulting clamor can be quite distressing. One point of view is so soothing, so quiet, so full of wholeness, compared to a myriad disparate views that clash hideously upon tender ear drums, that spill out on to the streets, that fill public halls with speechifying, that insist on being heard. Coarse voices that question everything, that refuse to see that the proper place for the poor man is at the rich man's gates, that things are bright and beautiful, that God's in his heaven and all's right with the world. Just imagine the distress of the Ancient Greek when the first of the hoi polloi emerged from Oracle's cave and said, " 'ere Mum, that weren't no Goddess, that were the Senator's lass with a snake round 'er neck."

And when the blindfold falls from hitherto bound eyes, what happens, here or in Spain, in Iran, or in Uganda? Divisiveness happens, of course. Ten nations instead of one. A hundred opinions instead of one. Class against class, cause against cause, solution against solution. The dreaded levelling-down takes place — why can't we all live like the Shah or Somoza or Princess Anne instead of dragging them down? The hideous envy sets in — such a mean emotion, don't you think? Perfectly all right to arouse it with your mansions and millions but rotten bad taste to feel it. Really, when you come to think about it, a good War or a really tough dictatorship is so much more ordered, so much quieter, than all this bickering. You see, if people haven't had any freedom, when they get it they don't immediately know what to do with it. So boring of them.

Conservatives, young or old, English or foreign, do seem to feel that dictatorships (friendly) and Wars, in general, are good things. "... the more deadly the danger the more indissoluble were the bonds," says Robert Dougall, and "... it was only after victory against all odds that we gradually drifted into the sour, divisive society we know today ..."

Perhaps the deadly danger did unite us, but what is usually carefully overlooked as another possible ingredient of the War's uniting power is the fact that war-time society created a more truly egalitarian society than anything we have seen since. Everyone had an equal share of food, clothes, furniture, and petrol. Empty houses were automatically requisitioned for homeless families. People from, as they say, all walks of life worked side by side for the same pay in the fire or ambulance service, even the munitions factories. Rich people in the country took in poor people from the towns and they all ate good brown bread together. Perhaps if we'd kept all that going when peace broke out, the politics of envy might never have arisen.

Nevertheless, I persist in my view that Britain is greater now than it was when it ruled an Empire. What's more, I believe that by a kind of cosmic accident we have all the ingredients of character necessary to usher in a better future, as long as we do not listen to the siren voices of a false nostalgia.

We are, for a start, blessed with a national temperament that veers towards laziness, a useful asset when faced with the micro-chip. We are basically home loving and, in the future, we may all spend far more time at home. Many of us are less interested in money than in having the time to garden, attend football matches, meet our friends — anyone who has had a British shopkeeper shut the door in their faces dead on five o'clock can bear witness to that. We are on the whole uncompetitive, unaggressive, and phlegmatic. We take kindly to the natural justice of minor regimentation, like queues, and we actually quite enjoy the idea of the simple life, rationing, shortages and cuts in living standards, as long as eveyone shares them.

All just the right traits for a tiny off-shore island race, if only they'd stop trying to make us Great and let us be small and beautiful.

The beautiful people push their bigotry

REDGRAVE ... gestures that rankle

MacLAINE ... blinded to the truth?

Consider Vanessa Redgrave, gaunt and wild-eyed, doggedly plugging the Workers' Revolutionary Party on television; or Jane Fonda, head modestly bowed as she posed in front of a damaged dike in North Vietnam; or Marlon Brando, proudly hobnobbing with outraged American Indians. Remember that horribly sincere homily by Shirley McLaine, boosting the virtues of Mao's China as opposed to our own sinful competitive system?

Why do these people and certain other celebrities taking up a cause throw out such glints of plastic? Why is their gospelling performance so irritating, in spite of a very real charm and moral sincerity? Theatrical fame, riches, and talent do not always mix well with political causes. One tends to respond with uncharitable thoughts about bandwagons, radical chic and — worst of all — publicity, that life-blood of show-business.

But it is simply not plausible that Ms Redgrave's commercial for ant-heap Trotskyism is a ploy to call attention to herself; she does not need the WRP for that. Neither does Brando need the Indians, nor Ms McLaine need China — for that. And yet their gestures rankle ... which seems unfair. These theatrical ayatollahs have the means to see as few other protesters can what the subjects of their concern are really like. Jane Fonda was there, she saw the damaged dikes, the bombed houses, the casualties. Her indignation and anguish were not merely performed. But they were projected by her talent, which is what really draws our attention.

It was once written of a certain performer that he seemed to think we liked him for himself, whereas we liked him for his talent. So it is with Ms Fonda and the rest: when they seek to light up a dungeon for their audience, the stone walls become a set; the dikes are a picturesque backdrop; napalm-seared children are reduced to bit-players and extras. Instead of being drawn toward the truth we are thrust into stall seats, converted into gawkers at a ghastly entertainment. The public's hold on political truth is tenuous at best, and when the beautiful people loosen that grip with the impact of their talent and reputation, it is no wonder they provoke suspicion or resentment.

And yet these are honorable people, they are sincere. Paradoxically that only makes it worse. Why? Because something else — something strange and a bit tragic — happens to certain stars when they take up political roles. The part plays the actor, so to speak, and the result can be a particularly ugly species of bigotry.

In their fervor these political ingenues can sometimes distort the evidence and warp the complexities of a real-life issue into seductive agit-prop melodrama with good guys on one side and villains on the other — as (for instance) Jane Fonda has done in Vietnam and in the current debate over nuclear power.

One cannot fault the fundamental decency and good intentions of these celebrity-agitators. Still, the very force of their compassion often blinds them to a grim truth: true believers with the best intentions have offered a cloak of morality to some of the most damnable terrorists in the world; they have paved many roads into the depths of hell and cheered while eager legions marched along them to suffer the most brutal tyranny. Remember the 'freedom' fighters in Vietnam?

The great American journalist Richard H. Rovere one pointed out: "Gullibility may be an amiable failing in some departments of life. The sucker may be afflicted with nothing but an excess of faith, hope and charity, and surely there are worse things than that? Political gullibility has political consequences which can be dangerous ..." Let the stars be loved like the good people they are. But when it comes to their politics — caveat emptor.

russell baker

The news that Richard Nixon will soon be living on the East Side of Manhattan prompts speculation about what might be said in a sidewalk summit of the Giants. This would occur if, by one of those rare, happy accidents, Jacqueline Onassis, Greta Garbo and the former president all found themselves simultaneously hurrying home from Madison Avenue with their shopping bags full of bagels. The meeting might be reported as follows:

"It began when Jacqueline Onassis collided with a woman carrying a shopping bag on the Upper East Side. The woman's bag burst, sending a cascade of bagels onto the sidewalk, and, with her customary charm, Mrs. Onassis bent over to retrieve them.

"They seem rather soiled," she apologized. "Why don't you take half of mine?"

The woman, who wore large sunglasses, dismissed the offer with a Swedish gesture which Mrs. Onassis, a serious student of the films of Ingmar Bergman, immediately took to mean, "the song of the nightingale on Midsummer's Night forebodes a weekend of futility in Stockholm."

You're Swedish!" cried Mrs. Onassis, which prompted the woman to repeat the gesture, very slowly, so that Mrs. Onassis could better understand it. This time she saw that the gesture meant, "since a bagel is only a bagel, let's forget the whole thing."

"Don't I know you behind those dark glasses?" Mrs. Onassis inquired.

The woman of the lost bagels shrugged. Mrs. Onassis correctly interpreted the gesture to mean, "even behind your own dark glasses, you look kind of familiar yourself."

Mrs. Onassis extended her hand. "Mrs. Onassis," she said, "and you must be Ingrid Bergman." The woman frowned.

"Liv Ullman?" asked Mrs. Onassis.

Before the woman could respond with an uninterested expression, Mrs. Onassis was jostled by a man wearing a California business suit and good Republican dark glasses. The collision knocked Mrs. Onassis' shopping bag to the sidewalk, where hurrying pedestrians trampled her bagels. The man was Richard Nixon carrying fresh bagels. As Nixon later recorded it, "I instantly recognized the existence of another crisis on two levels. At the first level I was confronted with a Swedish actress whom I took to be either Uta Hagen or Signe Hasso."

Uncertain of her identity, uncertain even whether Uta Hagen and Signe Hasso were actually Swedish, Nixon could not risk offending by greeting her with the wrong name. "I knew that in the forthcoming bagel confrontation, she might prove an invaluable ally" he wrote.

With the skill of a great diplomatist, he finessed the identity issue by crying, "I've loved every movie you have ever made."

* * *

Then addressing himself to the higher level of crisis, he dealt with Mrs. Onassis' trampled bagels.

"Some people," he told her, "would urge me to take the easy way. 'Oh, Mr. Nixon' they would say, 'take the easy way — apologize to Mrs. Onassis — offer her half of your own bagels — give her all of them — take her back to the bagel boutique and buy her a dozen fresh new bagels.' "

Mrs. Onassis tried to interrupt. "Don't I know you behind those good Republican dark glasses?" she asked.

"But I will never take the easy road," Nixon continued. "The easy way is the soft way. Give them your bagels today, tomorrow they'll want your cream cheese. And after the cream cheese they'll be in your pantry slicing your pastrami."

He was interrupted by a gesture from the other woman, and, not understanding Swedish gestures, paused to ask Mrs. Onassis to interpret.

"She wants to know which of her films you liked best," explained Mrs. Onassis. Nixon tried to evade the awkward question by giving her the V signal with both hands.

* * *

The woman, not understanding American gestures, inquired with a glance whether Mrs. Onassis could tell her which movie the double V signal stood for.

Mrs. Onassis said, "I think it refers to Patton, starring George C. Scott."

Upon hearing this, Nixon dropped his high diplomatic style, seized the woman's hand and pumped it delightedly, crying, "George C. Scott! My favorite actor — except for John Wayne, of course. And right out here in costume on the street!"

Then, pumping Mrs. Onassis' hand, he strode off in an excess of pleasure in his new home town. Mrs. Onassis asked the woman if she had been impressed by their new neighbor, but the woman shrugged that she wanted to be alone. Thus ended the summit conference.

Next day special messengers delivered a dozen fresh bagels, gift-wrapped, to Mrs. Onassis and George C. Scott.

Pension funds top performers

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian pension funds invested in mortgages outperformed the Toronto stock market's TSE 300 index in the 10 years to June 30, a study shows.

The study by B. J. Vincent Co. Ltd., a Toronto actuarial consultant, shows that 10 of the 12 mortgage pension funds surveyed had an annual yield higher than that of the TSE 300 index, which rose at an annual rate of nine per cent during the 10-year period.

The top performer was the Canada Permanent Mortgage fund. Based on a lump sum payment of $1,000 in 1969, the fund would show a value of $2,672 after 10 years for a 10.3-per-cent annual yield.

Based on equal monthly payments over the 10 years, the Canada Permanent fund would show a 10.6-per-cent annual yield.

On this basis, all of the 12 mortgage funds surveyed had a higher annual rate than the TSE 300 index, with the lowest rate at 9.4 per cent.

The survey also covered 12 funds invested in bonds and of these, four outperformed the index on a lump sum payment basis. Quebec Trust, the best performer, showed a 9.9-per-cent annual yield.

On a monthly payment basis, the top bond fund, Royal Trust, showed a 9.6-per-cent yield and six of the 12 funds did as well as or better than the index.

Stock ticker goes modern

NEW YORK (AP) — A computerized version of the old stock ticker will be available soon in homes and offices as a result of a link between The Associated Press and Dow Jones and Co. Inc.

An investor who wants to know the price of his or her stocks will be able to turn to a table-top computer terminal, press a few keys and the issues and prices will appear on a TV-like screen, as trading is going on.

To provide this service, the AP has made available through the Dow Jones News Retrieval Service its database of daily market quotations.

Subscribers to the Dow Jones service will be able to retrieve from AP's market computers price quotations for stocks, bonds, options and other securities by using timeshare or low-cost computer terminals.

The Dow Jones News Retrieval Service has several thousand subscribers, most of them businesses. It provides, in addition to market quotations, breaking stories from the Dow Jones wire, corporate information, industry information and economic news.

Insurance profits squeezed

TORONTO (CP) — A top insurance executive warns that profit margins of property-casuality insurance companies are on a collision course.

Daniel Damov, president of Travelers Group of Toronto, said the companies are caught between the pressures of rising claims costs resulting from inflation and unduly low premium charges that have not kept pace.

"Because of the economic slowdown and fierce competition for business among companies, pressures for premium increases are building and accelerating and these factors should come together early next year," he said in an interview.

But the move toward high prices and tight markets depends entirely on how soon the insurers react to the situation, he added.

Industry spokesmen agree that a crunch is coming but disagree in predicting when it will come.

As underwriting losses continue to mount following first-quarter loss of $51.7 million, industry officials expect collision warnings late this year, with tight markets and higher prices inevitable some time in 1980.

TD offers top rate

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Dominion Bank announced today that it will introduce a new savings account with interest calculated daily on Sept. 4.

The daily interest savings account will pay an annual interest of 9.5 per cent, highest currently being offered by the five major Canadian banks that have introduced daily interest accounts.

Interest will be calculated on daily balances and credited semi-annually. To be eligible, accounts will be required to have aminimum daily balance of $100. The new account will provide one free withdrawal a month.

Offer averts fish strike

VANCOUVER (UPC) — British Columbia's 4,000 shoreworkers vote this week on a tentative agreement reached after fishing companies came through with an 11th-hour offer.

The new one-year proposal, which narrowly averted a United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union strike Sunday that would have shut down the province's fishing industry just as the salmon were beginning to run, raises the shoreworkers' hourly rate by 83 cents an hour, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

The agreement was reached only hours after the union announced that the shoreworkers' section had voted 58 percent to reject the companies' previous "final" offer of 80-cents-hourly.

The union's negotiating committee has recommended shoreworkers accept the latest pact. Results of the vote were expected Friday, said the spokesman.

"I think we've done very well for a one-year contract," said union president Jack Nichol.

The new deal also includes increased industry contribution to the shoreworkers' welfare plan of three cents an hour to 15 cents for every straight-time hour worked per employee. The new hourly base rate under the pact will be $8.25.

Meanwhile, 600 tendermen voted 65.3 percent to accept the industry's offer and 7,000 salmon fishermen have accepted the industry's offer on minimum fish prices. But spokesmen for both groups have said no contract can be signed until all three sections of the industry reach agreement with the industry.

Tendermen will receive a 10.25-percent wage increase plus additional fringe benefits.

Victoria building permit value doubles

Building permit values in Victoria city doubled in July over the same month a year ago, due partly to more than $1 million worth of alterations and additions and nearly $1 million in new construction.

The July total of 374 permits — the highest for the month since 1975 — had a value of $3.5 million including 21 condominium units at $700,000 and five single family dwellings valued at $285,000.

In addition there were major projects like a $400,000 office facility at 844 Courtney, a $325,000 renovation to the juvenile detention home, $300,000 for work at the Ogden Point coast guard base and $200,000 each for an office at 825-7 Fort and a commercial-restaurant structure at 2706 Government.

Total value of new construction to date this year has been $27.2 million, down from $32 million to Aug. 1 last year.

Hydro loss $2M higher

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro reported Tuesday a first-quarter loss this year $2 million more than the corresponding period last year.

The Crown corporation reported a net loss of $16 million for the three months ended June 30 compared with a $14 million loss during the 1978 first quarter.

Chairman Robert Bonner said in a news release that expenses for the first quarter rose more than seven per cent to $218 million while the revenue increased almost seven per cent to $202 million.

Bonner said income traditionally improves in the second half of the year because of seasonal variations in electric and gas revenues.

Total electricity sales for the quarter rose by five per cent, but sales to commercial customers increased by 13 per cent.

Gas sales increased only one per cent even though customers increased four per cent, reflecting warmer than normal temperatures for the period and customer energy conservation practices, the company said.

Hydro reported that work is progressing satisfactorily on its hydroelectric projects, as the Peace Canyon on the Peace River, Seven Mile on the Pend d'Oreille and installation of the final generating unit at a generating station on the Peace River all are on schedule.

The Revelstoke project on the Columbia River is proceeding generally on time, it said, in spite of some problems resulting from poor rock conditions.

Detox centre opened

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The Adonis House, a detoxication centre for voluntarily-admitted alcoholics and addicts, was officially opened Tuesday by Mayor Mike Latta.

Latta said the centre, although only an interim facility, is a welcome addition to the city which has more than its fair share of persons with drug and alcohol problems.

Pickup hits semi, three die

SURREY (CP) — Three young men died today when their pickup truck smashed into the side of a semi-trailer unit in this suburban municipality just east of Vancouver.

Police said the impact of the collision left the pickup in pieces and ruptured the gasoline tanks on the larger truck.

Names of the dead were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Tree bylaw flip-flops through

In an unusual but apparently legal move Tuesday, Saanich council defeated a controversial tree protection bylaw, then changed its mind and endorsed it.

Final reading of the bylaw was defeated in a 3-3 vote, but Ald. Fred Severson reversed his negative vote at the urging of Mayor Mel Couvelier.

Couvelier said he was disappointed at council's treatment of the "watered-down" final draft after all the work that had been done on it.

The original draft's tough stand against indiscriminate logging practices had been revised until it offered little protection, Ald. Geoff Vantreight said. But Vantreight, who voted against the original bylaw because he felt it too restrictive, said what was left was better than no protection at all.

The bylaw was drawn up quickly after extensive tree cutting took place on 7.6 acres near Mount Douglas Park on Cordova Bay Road.

Ald. Severson said he supported the bylaw until the last moment but changed his mind because he now felt it discriminatory.

Severson said he still had reservations about parts of the bylaw, but agreed to change his vote.

According to municipal solicitor Chris Nation, the second vote was allowable because Couvelier did not declare the results of the first vote.

In other business, council went ahead with its intention to give first reading to bylaws creating a Royal Oak industrial park zone, in spite of opposition by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

Council wants to get provincial government approval of the project by Sept. 4 and gave three readings to a $4 million loan authorization bylaw and a bylaw creating a specified area.

Saanich MLA Curtis has said he has no power to stop council but he will communicate his objections to other ministries that must approve the project.

He is suggesting future industrial development take place at the existing Keating Crossroads industrial park in Central Saanich.

According to Couvelier any delays in the approval procedure will be attributed to political interference. He said the ministries involved will have plenty of time to study the plans before Sept. 4.

A suggestion by Ald. Fred Severson council negotiate for the 1983 Western Canada Games was approved by council.

Severson said the application to host the games must be submitted by Aug. 18. He said subsidies were available from the federal government.

The municipality already has all the necessary facilities, Severson added.

Council also passed a recommendation by its ad hoc committee studying the use of beaches that 12 warning signs be posted on beaches in the municipality. The signs, stating vandalism is a criminal offence, will cost an estimated $1,772.

Also approved was a recommendation by Saanich Fire Chief Art Fryer the municipality purchase a new triple combination pumper truck at a cost of $76,269. The bid submitted by Howard Distributors was the lowest of four received by the fire department.

Pig heels when he's not nibbling!

MONTREAL (CP) — C.P. the pig is a capable animal. "He can do anything a dog can do," his trainer says. "He obeys orders. He sits. He heels. He'll even eat out of your mouth."

Oh?

"He's very intelligent, completely house-trained and very well-behaved."

What's more: C.P. is a guard-pig.

A what?

Well, a watch-pig, then.

M. D. Leblanc, a professional police dog trainer from British Columbia, bought C.P. two months ago, intending to fatten him up. But then he noticed that C.P. was picking up tricks faster than the dogs he was training. So now he's showing him around the country, trying to convince people C.P. would be better to have around the home for protection than a dog.

"If they get you, watch out. A big pig can gnaw its way through concrete and crush your fingers like matchsticks."

Leblanc says C.P. has already fought a vicious battle with a Doberman and won.

C.P. didn't even look up.

"It must be the wind," Leblanc explained. "It's blowing in the wrong direction."

Suddenly, C.P. looked up, reared back and charged . . . then slowed down again and nibbled on more grass.

Leblanc looked pleased.

"Some of the pigs they have on television," he said, "are nothing compared to this one. All they do is open things with their noses; but this one can heel, sit up and do all kinds of tricks.

"He likes disco music, he can hop onto a table, and he's also fluently bilingual."

Kamloops cop-kicker fined $800

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A woman who went on a drinking spree which culminated when she kicked a policeman was fined a total of $800 Tuesday after she pleaded guilty to four charges.

Mary Cowan, 24, of Kamloops, pleaded guilty in provincial court to charges of impaired driving, causing a disturbance, resisting a police officer and refusing to take a breath test.

Court was told that employees of a city liquor store refused to sell the woman alcohol June 23.

Judge William Diebolt fined Cowan $250 for impaired driving, $450 for refusing to take a breath test, $100 for resisting a police officer and gave her a six-month suspended sentence for causing a disturbance.

Chile's word 'just a croc'

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Supporters of Galindo Madrid, a Chilean refugee, who fears he will be killed if deported, have likened assurances by the Chilean government that Madrid will not be harmed if he returns home to "crocodile promises."

Darryl Adams, a member of the Galindo Madrid Defence Committee, said Tuesday he hopes the federal government will not send the 22-year-old refugee back to Chile on the word of a government which "has lost credibility in the international community."

"It's a crocodile promise, not worth the paper it's printed on and we trust the minister will consider the new information we gave him" and let Madrid remain in Canada, Adams said.

Joaquin Grubner, Chilean consul in Vancouver, said he has received word from his embassy in Ottawa that the Chilean regime is willing to let the Canadian government keep tabs on the refugee through the Canadian embassy in Santiago to make sure no harm comes to him.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson, who has taken the young refugee's fight to Immigration Minister Ron Atkey last week, has said an "L" on Madrid's passport means he is a marked man who faces certain torture and death if he returns to Chile.

Atkey is studying the new evidence and has given Madrid assurances he will not be deported without "reasonable time" to find a third country to take him as a refugee.

Since he jumped ship in nearby Squamish in March, 1977, Madrid has been trying to win political refugee status, but all attempts so far have failed.

Wolf, bear poisoning approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial fish and wildlife branch has been given pesticide control branch approval to poison wolves, coyotes and bears — a move which reopens a long-simmering controversy in British Columbia.

The permit approves the use of the poisons 1080 (sodium monofluoroacetate) and cyanide to control bear, coyote and wolf on private and public land.

The main condition is that the poison use be restricted "to specifically reported and confirmed instances of problem predators killing, damaging, or harassing livestock, damaging property or crops, or threatening human safety."

The poisons cannot be used on private land without the approval of the owner or occupant. And the chemical 1080 must not be used for bear control.

"I'm sure that B.C. is now the only place in the world were wolves are poisoned," said George Clements of the Association for the Protection of Fur Bearing Animals.

He said that last March Environment Minister Rafe Mair announced a two-year study in northern B.C. to determine the true extent of wolf predation on livestock.

Clements said he is shocked that the poison permit should be issued when this study is still going on and its results are not yet known.

The wolf poisoning controversy arose in B.C. in early 1978 when poisoning resumed in the Burns Lake area for the first time in 10 years because of increasing complaints from sheep and cattle ranchers.

There were also claims by biologists that wolves were decimating the caribou population in B.C.

Ray Halladay, chief of wildlife management for the branch, said Tuesday he is well aware that the issuing of the permit will probably revive the controversy over poisoning.

He said the poison will only be used in areas where there is a "chronic livestock problem."

"The minister has reaffirmed government policy to minimize livestock losses with limited use of poisons."

Vancouverite gets extension

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government says it has decided to give George Spanoudis of Vancouver until Friday afternoon to come up with the money for the cruise ship Mercator One.

The purchase of the ship was to be concluded last Friday, but provincial Development Minister Roland Thornhill said in a statement Tuesday that Spanoudis has had difficulties in getting the $8 million in U.S. currency.

A group of businessmen headed by Spanoudis has already given the province a non-returnable deposit of $300,000 in U.S. funds.

Thornhill's statement said that, as the group had made a deposit, it was in the best interests of Spanoudis and the province to allow the group additional time. He did not elaborate.

It is the second extension granted the Spanoudis group. In early July the government granted him an extension when he suffered a heart attack.

The cruise ship has been a thorn in the side of two successive governments.

The former Liberal government was blamed by the opposition for poor judgment in allowing Mercator Enterprises Ltd. of Halifax $5.9 million in mortgage funds and working capital to launch the cruise ship operation in 1976.

MAGI finally foreclosed on the mortgage and seized the ship in 1977 when the initial cruises in the Caribbean were unsuccessful.

Since coming to office last September, the Progressive Conservative government has been trying to sell the vessel.

Meanwhile, Lynn Helpard, president of Cruise Centre International Ltd. of Montreal, said his company wants to buy the Mercator for a "reasonable" price of about $2 million.

"We have been interested in buying the Mercator for some time," he said. "However, the province doesn't seem to take our offer or our deals seriously."

He said his company felt the $3.5 million asking price for the Mercator was exorbitant.

Graceful old barquentine to try Northwest Passage

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A graceful barquentine that arrived in the Inner Harbor on the weekend could be the first square-rigger to attempt to sail the Northwest Passage from west to east.

Havers says he hopes to make the Arctic attempt two years from now.

Up to the time the Havers bought her in 1969 she was still earning her keep hauling cargo.

Havers says she's registered to work in three-inch ice. Her hull has three-inch oak planking on the outside. Inside she has six-inch oak frames three inches apart and a three-inch oak inner hull.

Havers says some of the United States's best known explorers will be aboard when Our Svanen heads for the Northwest Passage.

The ship looks none the worse for wear in spite of the 12,000 miles she's logged since she left the Cornish port of Falmouth last November 22.

Havers, who is also a helicopter pilot, is one of six people in the world who manage "super yachts" for a living, he says. His employers have included such people as Brigitte Bardot, Kirk Kerkorian of Las Vegas and Adnan Khashoggi of Saudi Arabia.

He and his wife work three years at a stretch then take six months off to relax.

HAVERS
. . . sailing for himself

When they first bought Our Svanen they took her to Nykobing Mors, the oldest wood ship building yard in Denmark.

"We took her in there and stripped everything off. She was just a hulk. There she sat for a long time," Havers says.

Meanwhile, Havers and his wife kept working, amasssing the money needed to restore Our Svanen to her original beauty. He figures $500,000 would be a break-even estimate of her cost. He recently turned down a written bid of $450,000 in San Francisco.

Measuring 135 feet over-all with her bowsprit, everything aboard Our Svanen has been made on board with the exception of one 150-pound truss in the rigging that had to be forged ashore.

The sewing machine — an old Singer — that was used to make her 15 sails is still aboard. The sails are made of flax which was made in Scotland.

Havers says she now has 42 tons of ballast in her to ensure her sailing capabilty is at the maximum. He studied plans of old sailing vessels in order to come up with a design that would be both attractive and efficient. During her 12,000-mile voyage she clocked 12 knots for hours.

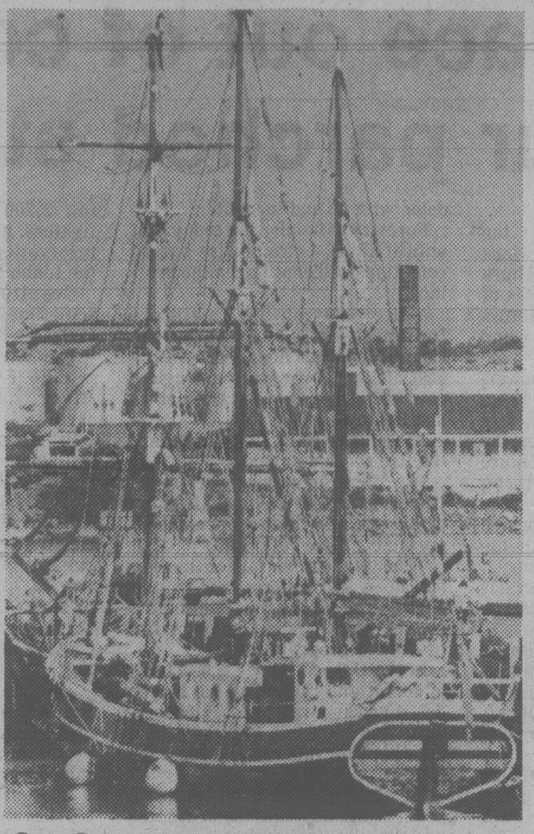
Havers and his wife intend to spend the next few months visiting some of his favorite spots, such as Maple Bay.

Now that they have the square-rigger of their dreams, the Havers want no more of other people's yachts, no matter how luxurious they are.

He adds, "There's a 90 per cent chance she'll be used to make a movie in Mexico in January, February and March."

Two glossy magazines have also chartered the vessel for articles on Alaska and the Aleutians.

Havers says he would like to do some youth sail training work because youngsters gain so much from life aboard vessels such as Our Svanen. Unfortunately, he says, it is not lucrative enough to provide a full-time living.



Our Svanen, the beauty of yesteryear

Boy faces adult trial for murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 16-year-old Chilliwack, youth will be tried in adult court for second-degree murder, a British Columbia Supreme Court judge ruled Tuesday.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer, in dismissing an appeal under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, said he upheld provincial court judge Dara Vamplow's decision because he could find no instance of Vamplow giving consideration or weight to irrelevant matters when weighing all material elements of the case.

The youth was arrested at the age of 15 following the strangulation death of a Chilliwack woman in December, 1978, and subsequently charged with theft and second-degree murder, which carries a life sentence with a 10-year-minimum.

John Lee, the youth's lawyer, said an appeal of the Supreme Court ruling is being considered.

Snowmobiles already?

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The roar of snowmobiles returns to this southern Interior city this month — but not because of a drastic shift in its normal hot, dry summer.

Tired of waiting for winter to arrive, and bored with the weeks of repetitive sunny, cloudless days in the high 20s and low 30s, a local group has decided to hold a snowmobile contest Aug. 19.

Object of the competition is to see how far men and machines can go across the North Thompson River without using a bridge.

Times News Services

Firefighters are looking to the skies for a break from strong winds and high temperatures as fires burn out of control in four dry states of the western U.S., roaring across thousands of acres of timber and range land.

"There's no force on earth powerful enough to cope with what we've seen," said Gordon Stevens, fire boss on one of the biggest blazes, the Mortar Creek fire in Idaho. "Nature will just have to do her thing first."

Smoke from that blaze, which Stevens said "will rank with the greatest fires in recent memory," darkened the sky more than 150 kilometres away at Yellowstone Park on Tuesday.

From a headquarters in Boise, Idaho, fire bosses were calling reserves from as far away as New England to battle 15 fires out of control in Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming.

In British Columbia, forest fires have cost every man, woman and child in the province at least $4 each so far this year, say forestry officials.

The present dry spell has lasted 28 days, with no end in sight.

Forestry officials said today that until it rains, extreme fire hazard conditions will continue in the province.

A fire today on the East Sooke Indian reserve and another on Eagle Mountain near Port Moody east of Vancouver were among 184 new fires which have started since last Friday.

There have been 2,435 fires since the fire season started.

The East Sooke blaze destroyed two acres before being snuffed out by air tankers which dropped about six loads of fire retardant.

"The total cost so far for the year has been $8.5 million, and that is only on the direct fire fighting account," said Arnold Ginnever, fire protection program manager.

In the U.S., at least 135,000 acres of forest and rangeland have been destroyed and weather service forecasts for the next few days hold little hope for rains to help douse the flames.

The Interagency Fire Centre, a federal agency that co-ordinates and supplies firefighting manpower and equipment around the U.S., has mobilized a force of 4,500 — including 2,500 Forest Service firefighters, hundreds of Indians from reservations across the West and the Idaho National Guard.

The Mortar Creek fire, along the Middle Fork of Idaho's Salmon River, covered at least 50,000 acres.

In eastern Idaho, the month-old Gallagher Peak fire reached 57,000 acres, although its advance was stopped on the northern end.

In Oregon, reinforcements were called Tuesday night to help extinquish a 920-acre blaze in remote terrain of the Umatilla National Forest. Officials hoped to have 500 firefighters on the lines today and contain the blaze Thursday morning.

The fire, burning in lodgepole and Ponderosa pine in canyons along the north fork of the John Day River, began Monday from an undetermined cause.

In Montana, a crew of more than 300 began to gain control over a 2,500-acre blaze west of Anaconda on Tuesday, and officials said there was some hope of putting it out soon.

Toxic fumes to wind

SEATTLE (AP) — Highly toxic lead vapor leaking from a railway tanker produced a cloud 300 to 400 feet long before the car was moved to an area where the wind could blow the substance harmlessly over Puget Sound.

The leak in the Burlington Northern tank car was discovered by two rail-yard workers near the waterfront and the Seattle Fire Department called. The vapor drifted south toward Pier 91 before the car was moved to an area where the breeze could disperse it.

The tank car contained tetraethyl, a liquid anti-knock compound used in automobile gasoline, said fire marshal William Hepburn, and can cause fatal lead poisoning.

Envoy's death irks

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said today a Soviet diplomat has been "killed, killed brutally" in Switzerland, and angrily asked whether it is possible to continue to use the country as an international meeting place.

The newspaper said Leonid Panchenko, an employee of the secretariat of the International Cocoa Organization, was found in a bathtub April 7 with his wrists slashed in the town of Aarau.

But although the death was reported as a suicide, Izvestia said, Soviet doctors are convinced it was murder. It said Swiss counter-intelligence services may have been involved.

"We are far from accusing Swiss official organs of directly killing Leonid Panchenko," the paper said.

Haifa parley fails to solve PLO problem

Times News Services

HAIFA, Israel — A stormy, three-day round of talks on Palestinian autonomy ended Tuesday with agreement on only a few marginal matters and continuing conflict on fundamental issues.

Israel remained fiercely at odds with the United States and Egypt over how much freedom should be extended to Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

The last series of meetings was the most acrimonious of the five that have been held since talks on autonomy started last May, sources said.

Israel, Egypt and the United States reportedly agreed here on seven "terms of reference" for continuing negotiations on elections to set up Palestinian self-rule in Gaza and the West Bank.

The accord contained no substantial agreement on how to carry out the elections and amounted in effect to an agenda for more talks on the subject.

A reflection of the strained atmosphere came with allegations, made in a newspaper interview by Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, that the United States has adopted anti-Israeli policies to placate the Saudi Arabians and thereby ease its own energy crisis.

In the interview, Dayan made a scathing attack on what he said were U.S.-backed moves for revising United Nations Resolution 242, the formula on which Middle East peace efforts have been pinned.

There have been continuing reports that the U.S. is hoping to get the Palestine Liberation Organization to recognize Israel's right to exist and support the treaty negotiations in return for an amended resolution that would call for a Palestinian homeland and recognize the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinian people.

Israel has bitterly resisted such a move, saying that no tampering with the UN resolution could make it negotiate with the PLO, which it considers only a terrorist organization.

President Carter, saying there has been no change in his policy toward the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), was to meet today with the new Israeli ambassador Ephraim Evron. Associate White House press secretary Jerrold Schecter said Carter would use the occasion to indicate that U.S.-Israel ties are "as close as ever."

Meanwhile, administration officials, including Vice-President Walter Mondale, said the president had no intention of opening any talks with the PLO until the PLO accepts UN Resolution 242.

At the beginning of the week, Israeli Interior Minister Yosef Burg warned that his government might rethink its peace treaty obligations to Egypt if there is any attempt to insert Palestinian rights into the resolution.

Israel has supported Resolution 242 because it acknowledged its right to exist within secure boundaries. It mentions the Palestinians only in passing as a refugee problem.

Oil alarm sounded

PARIS (Reuter) — A top International Energy Agency official says world oil supplies could fall short of demand by as much as four million barrels a day by 1985 if present trends continue.

Agency Executive Director Ulf Lantze, writing in the monthly magazine of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, said the shortfall could reach 10 million barrels a day by 1990 and 28 million barrels a day by end of the century.

About 40 to 50 houses were destroyed by the passage of the tornado. Many barns collapsed, one while cattle were still inside.

The dead cattle were pulled out of the ruins this morning by a winch-equipped truck, while the ones still alive cried out as they waited to be rescued.

Marylou Kennedy said out of 70 head of dairy cattle on her family's 150 acre farm in Oxford Centre one had to be destroyed. Generators were operating milking machines this morning.

The wind blew two new grain trailers, each worth $8,000, into the Kennedy farm house. A silo unloader that was installed last week was destroyed.

"We hadn't even used it yet, " she said.

Although most of the roof of their house is gone and uprooted trees cover their lawn, Mrs. Kennedy said she was not letting the situation depress her too much.

"We've had our cry," she said as her family gathered around her. "We'll eventually get things going again."

"I've never seen anything like it," said Angus Mowat of Oxford Centre. "The whole village is gone. The church, the community centre, the store . . . ."

Mowat lost his house and two cars in the storm, joining countless others whose homes were reduced to rubble. There were reports of cars, tobacco kilns and whole buildings vanishing in the wake of the twister.

Ontario Environment Minister Harry Parrott, member of the legislature for Oxford, and Attorney-General Roy McMurtry was flying today over the area, about 130 kilometres southwest of Toronto, to determine whether provincial aid is required.

Parrott said he would then meet Mayor Calder to discuss the damage.

"There is no doubt about the seriousness of this, it's just terrible," Parrott said.

Victoria to lose its weather station

hours. But there will be no one at the station on the weekends to do the job.

"It will be impossible to continue keeping those records on a continuous basis," he said.

Certain climatic conditions, monitored on a 24-hour basis using the station's MARS unit, won't be affected by the move to Vancouver.

MARS is an acronym for Meteorlogical Automatic Reporting Station. The unit automatically records temperature, dew point, average winds and percipitation.

The spokesman said wind gust information, so important to mariners and aviators, could be recorded automatically if a new system was installed.

"Technologically we have the means. But I don't think the government wants to spend the dollars. The system is costly."

The absence of staff on the weekends, the spokesman said, will be particularly felt by the airport which relies on Gonzales weathermen for visual weather observations, such as cloud heights over the city.

He said the federal transport department is concerned about the problem and is apparently considering establishing a weather observation station in the Inner Harbor for aviation purposes.

However, he said nothing can replace the loss of weather information the move to Vancouver may entail.

"The only solution I can see is to find some other government department or even commercial business to lease the building on the understanding they would maintain an observing program."

The weather service is presently stationed at three locations in the province, with forecasts prepared at Vancouver Airport, data gathering in Victoria and the headquarters in downtown Vancouver.

Pickets hit Tel, ferries that the teamsters picketed two terminals last week when an attempt was made to deliver fuel from the struck companies.

B.C. Ferries had to cancel two Tuesday sailings between Horseshoe Bay in West Vancouver and Langdale, about 35 kilometres northwest of Vancouver.

The Queen of Burnaby, which sails the route, was transferred to the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run where the ferry Queen of Nanaimo was short on fuel.

Meanwhile, phone service today became another victim of the labor dispute.

More than 500 B.C. Telephone Co. employees in Burnaby refused today to cross a teamsters picket line thrown up at the B.C. Tel supply, transportation and building headquarters in Burnaby. The telephone company employees are members of the Telecommunication Workers Union.

Tanker collides

BREMEN, West Germany (AP) — A tanker carrying 60 million gallons of crude oil collided with a freighter in the North Sea off the West German coast today, but there were no injuries and no oil spill, officials said.

They identified the vessels as the 232,643-ton Andros Titan and the 15,348-ton Lord Hastings, both of Greek registry.

The 26 crewmembers of the Lord Hastings were taken by helicopter from the vessel because of fears of an explosion, officials said.

Spokesmen for the German Ship Rescue Association said the Andros Titan suffered some damage and dropped anchor.

Rescuers said the tanker was headed for the port of Wilhelmshaven. A Hamburg shipping agent dispatched another vessel from Cuxhaven to tow the stricken tanker to port.

They're paddling to adventure

By JANE COVERNTON
Times Staff

The promise of adventure on the sea and on swirling white water rivers is creating a small boom in kayak and white water canoe sales on Vancouver Island.

But more and more people are venturing on to the sea in touring kayaks, exploring the Gulf Islands or the Broken Islands group in Barkley Sound.

A standard kayak, fully equipped, would cost about $500. The deluxe models could go as high as $1,000.

White water canoeing —shooting the rapids — is also becoming more popular, even though there are only a few suitable rivers on the island.

Cliff Morton of Morton Marine in Mill Bay makes canoes.

He says sales of the longer, narrower white water canoes are up about 20 per cent over last year.

A total outfit costs about $500.

Morton says all kinds of people are buying white water canoes.

"We get guys coming in who are still in school and guys who are retired. There are lots of husband-and-wife teams who want to spend time together. That's nice to see."

One reason is that more school teachers are learning how to canoe with the club and then taking their classes out.

Frank Johnson, who edits the VCC newsletter says, "In a canoe your partner can be 80 years old or 15 years old. It doesn't matter as long as you get along."

Johnson has been canoeing since he retired four years ago.

"For the first year, I was one of the people they rescued every time we went."

Now he's contemptuous of the popular canoe areas and keeps it a secret when he finds some special place.

"Canoeing on the West Coast Trail, you might as well put up traffic signs."

He says beginners should take lessons for their own safety.

Courses are offered by the Victoria Canoe Club, the YMCA, the University of Victoria and Camosun College.

Two small Indian boys named Clayton and Jimmy sat jammed into a single seat next to me. Though they yawned at regular intervals, they didn't fidget and both said they were enjoying the Cowichan Indian opera, Tzinquaw.

Jimmy wasn't quite sure what it was he liked about it but when I suggested the dancing, he said yep, that was it. And what was it that Clayton liked? "Everything!"

And that just about sums up the feeling of the packed house that gave the Indian cast a standing ovation Sunday night after the second and final performance in the new Duncan Theatre of the revived version of the first Indian opera in North America when it was presented in 1950.

Directed by Roberta Scotthorne, enhanced considerably by some fine piano playing from Gilbert Munroe, and featuring the traditional songs and dances of the Cowichan Indian Band, the show was a fine one, indeed.

You see, one of two men responsible for the first show 29 years ago — Indian Abel Joe — played the same starring role of Skeecullus (The Thinker) in the new version. And he has his own reasons for bringing the opera out of the mothballs of his mind.

The other person involved back then was white man Frank Morrison who wanted to preserve the songs and dances of the Cowichan Indians.

"I began in 1942 and it took four years to gain the confidence and co-operation of the Indians to allow me to make piano interpretations of their melodies and dance rhythms," Morrison wrote in the original program.

"Finally, through helping the Indians with their church music, I got Abel Joe to come to my home and sing Indian songs to me while I wrote down the nearest possible piano equivalents," he explained.

Morrison also translated the thoughts of the Indian people into English lyrics and the pair worked for another four years together before coming up with Tzinquaw.

It is the tale that is told by the O'whey-whey-ems (The Story-Tellers) of how, in the days of very long ago, Tzinquaw, the Thunderbird, and Quannis, the Killer Whale, did battle in the waters of Cowichan Bay.

Quannis, so the legend goes, for many weeks swam back and forth in the quiet waters and by his evil ways drove all the fish away. Then came the months of the fishing and there were no fish for the Indian people to catch. And the people grew weak from hunger. Some died and finally the Indians realized that they alone, with their paddles and spears and ropes, were not strong enough to kill Quannis.

Then Skeecullus called for help from the Schnayum (the Medicine Man) and with the rolling of thunder and flashing of lightning along came Tzinquaw, the Thunderbird, "to kill the evil whale and cast his body on the beach so that his Cowichan people may have food."

When Tzinquaw was produced in 1950, it was a hit. After playing in Duncan, the company took it on tour to Victoria, Vancouver and up north. If they can get a booking, the Cowichan Indian Players will bring the new version to Victoria once again.

"This is the first time Tzinquaw has been performed in 29 years," Abel Joe told the audience after Sunday night's show. "The late Frank Morrison and I worked hard for four years on this and I'm sure he'd be happy today that we have brought Tzinquaw back to the Cowichan people."

Backstage later, Abel told me he was one of seven of the original cast of 21 who were also in the new show. Most of the others in this show, he said, were younger generation Indians who weren't even born back then. And it was for them — the young people — he had decided to revive it.

Mindful of the alcohol problems and the rash of suicides that have plagued his band in recent years, Abel Joe said the young Indians need something to keep them busy and something to rekindle the interest in their culture.

"They have lost the language and have to learn it first before they can take part in a show like this," he said of the younger Indians. "And I've always said without the language there is no culture, so it is up to us to help them regain this."

"I didn't like to die with what I had made," he explained. "Frank Morrison has gone and I was the only one who could revive Tzinquaw for the younger generation. This means a lot to us and I hope they keep it going.

"There is not enough rain on earth to wipe out the footsteps of our ancestors and make us forget all about our culture . . ."

Ecology reserves designated

The two islets are Jimmy Jones off Ten-Mile Point and Alpha off the Discovery Island lighthouse.

Ecological director Bristol Foster said the Chain Islands reserve includes the seabed to a depth of five fathoms.

The rocky islands, well known to fisherman, are nesting habitat for large colonies of seabirds, including gulls, oyster catchers and cormorants.

"Scuba divers can explore the seabed around the islands but should not take anything out," Foster said.

Foster also said people should not walk on the islands at this time of year.

No baring on case

Saanich police today discounted a report that a woman accomplice exposed herself Tuesday to distract store employees while a knife-wielding companion robbed the Safeway store at University Heights shopping centre of $662.

First reports indicated the bandit was accompanied by a young woman who bared her breasts to distract the clerk's attention.

However, a police spokesman said that while a woman was seen walking through the store with her shirt open at the time, she was not involved in any way with the robbery.

Police said the bandit entered the store at 12:10 p.m. and approached clerk Laurie Gregory, 19, who was just closing her till to go on lunch break.

He produced a long-bladed knife and ordered her to fill a paper bag with bills from the till.

MAYHEW

SHUNS CIVIL SERVANT LABEL

Mayhew relinquishes development reins

Greater Victoria economic development commissioner Barry Mayhew Tuesday announced he will quit Oct. 31.

Mayhew has made no bones about the fact he is not happy with a proposal that the Capital Regional District take over the economic development commission.

He said he is resigning because he is going back to the private sector in Victoria to what he described as a "very exciting opportunity".

But he admitted that the possibility of having to function almost as a civil servant under the CRD had been a factor in his decision to quit.

He said as an employee of the CRD he would have a lot less opportunity to speak his mind, adding he has been criticized for speaking out on political decisions.

The CRD's economic development committee, headed by Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, is proposing that the economic development commission become a regional function with all components — municipalities and electoral areas — participating.

Commission board chairman Larry Ryan said Tuesday Sooke, which already has an economic development commission, would have the option of staying with its own organization or joining the regional district's commission.

Until now the commission has been funded by the four core municipalities and the provincial government. The move to make it a regional function came because there is doubt that the provincial government will continue to pay its share.

Ryan said Tuesday that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has said the commission would have a better chance of continued funding if it covered a wider area than the four core municipalities.

Mayhew noted there are 14 such commissions in B.C., all organized by the provincial government except Greater Victoria and one funded by Vancouver.

The other commissions, he said, received 90 per cent funding from the provincial government in the first year, 70 per cent in the next, 50 per cent the following year and were totally funded by the regional districts in the fourth year.

Regional board chairman Murray Glazier said today the commission and Mayhew had come to the regional district asking that the function be taken over by the CRD in an effort to find a long-term solution to its funding.

Glazier said regional planning and economic development go hand in hand. He said the district had asked the commission to work out the terms of the transfer.

"It had to involve Mr. Mayhew coming to the CRD on some basis. He would have to adjust to that change," Glazier said.

"I don't want the function to become another committee here. It would have to be structured in such a way it has broad community support and is not lost in any bureacracy."

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said Tuesday if the position of economic development commissioner is not filled, the area will take a giant step backwards.

He said would-be developers are very skeptical of politicians and Mayhew had been successful because they viewed him as a consultant with no strings attached.

Small said he hoped any CRD economic development commission would function like the present one with representation from labor, the public service sector and other areas of the community.

Townsend service set

A memorial service will be held at First Memorial Services Ltd., 1030 Falaise Drive, at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, for Ernest Townsend, president of the B.C. Motel Resort and Trailer Park Association, who died suddenly on Saturday Aug.4.

A driving force in promoting the motel business, Townsend was also a director of the Victoria Information centre and the Langford Chamber of Commerce.

Prior to becoming involved in the motel business, he served as a machinist at Yarrows and HMCS Dockyard and later as a commercial fisherman off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

He was born in England and came to Victoria in 1951.

Antiquated system prompts water plea

An overloaded and antiquated water distribution system prompted the Central Saanich water committee Tuesday to ask residents north of Mills Road to restrict their use of water.

Chairman Ald. Jim Cumming called the special session of the committee as dry weather continued to create huge demands for water.

The distribution system in most sections of Central Saanich is well able to handle summertime loads, but there have been problems delivering water in the higher areas north of Mills Road.

Mayor George Westwood said that the committee is hoping to avoid imposing water rationing in the area.

"We're asking for the cooperation of the public to get us through this difficult period," he said.

Residents in the affected area are being asked to stop watering lawns and any nonessential use of water.

Westwood said there was no single problem. Rather, it is a series of weaknesses in the system that is creating the shortages.

There is no problem with the water supply itself, as the municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney are now served by a pipeline that brings water from the Sooke Hills watershed.

Lost jobs blamed on economy

A major equipment and supply dealer today said the economy and devalued Canadian dollar have contributed to the closure of several operations and the loss of about 130 jobs.

Claude Butler, president of Butler Bros. Supplies Ltd., 2046 Keating, said the firm is consolidating and devoting its energies to the development of new machinery lines to serve the construction, heavy equipment, logging and transportation industries.

In the past year the company payroll has fallen from 265 employees and distributors in the U.S., Alberta and B.C. have closed, including those at Kamloops and Parksville. The firm's Langley branch will close shortly, Butler said.

Part of the difficulty is with foreign manufactured equipment on which the rate of monetary exchange has in some cases wiped out profit margins.

The American closure is not necessarily permanent, Butler said.

Butler's operations customarily follow the general economy, rising and falling with conditions, but the remote businesses are more difficult to control, he said.

"We've been reorganizing and getting rid of the weak areas and building up the strong ones. I believe we can improve operations substantially," Butler said.

The equipment business on Vancouver Island will be run from Central Saanich because it is right next door to corporate headquarters, making it easier to control, he said.

Meanwhile the firm's retail and concrete mix businesses are going well and no changes are anticipated.

"Many things are changing in the company. There is a lot of potential and some new developments will be pursued actively," Butler said.

He referred to machines and components which had been proven successful and have aroused widespread interest.

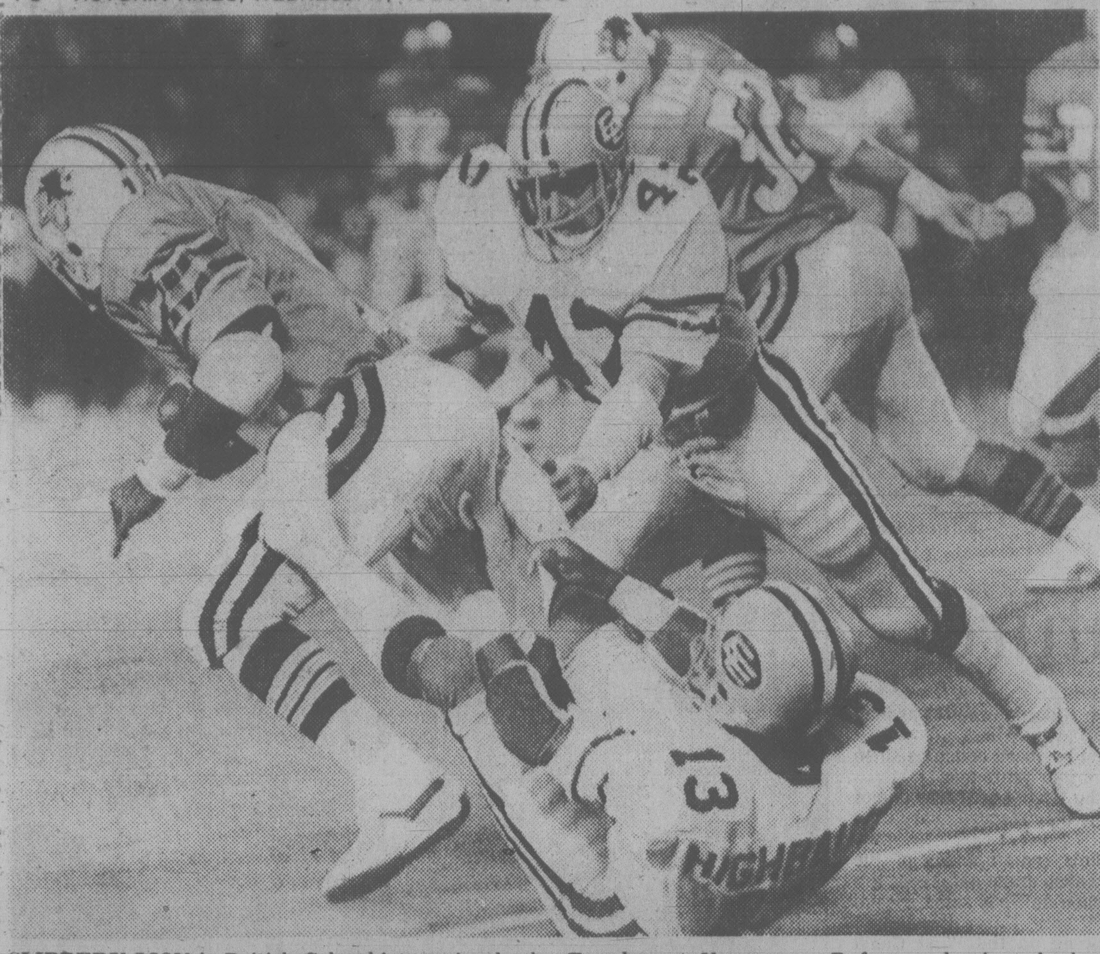
These include a new four-axle suspension for heavy trucks, a new large capacity cement truck and the Mark V logging truck capable of carrying a 230-ton payload.

"We still believe in that unit," Butler said of the 1,000 hp vehicle which has attracted world-wide interest.

He was optimistic of the company's prospects. "We have a lot of exciting things on the drawing board. Our business is looking very good. I can't see any major problems."

Although there has been a period of years in which few large buildings have been constructed locally, Butler said the concrete business still has potential, particularly for such a competitive transport as Butler's four-axle truck that raised mixer capacity from $7\frac{1}{4}$ to $11\frac{1}{4}$ yards and has greatly improved steering to improve construction site access.

Butler said there are negotiations with a major company to produce components for this truck.



SLIPPERY LION is British Columbia running back Larry Key, who escapes grasp of Edmonton cornerback Larry Highbaugh (13) and evades linebacker Dan Kepley during Canadian Football League game Tuesday at Vancouver. Defences dominated play most of night as Lions and Eskimos remained undefeated by battling to 14-14 deadlock before 30,137 fans, largest Vancouver crowd of season. (CP photo)

Campbell's riddle but Rapp's delight

By The Canadian Press

A proud moment for British Columbia Lions was equally as sour for Edmonton Eskimos when the Canadian Football League's only undefeated teams collided Tuesday night in Vancouver.

"I've never been prouder of a football team which didn't win than I was of our team tonight," said coach Vic Rapp of the Lions, now 4-0-1. "That was two of the best efforts I've ever seen by two teams on the same field at the same time.

"We were lucky enough not to win," said Campbell, "and unlucky not to lose.

"Right now I feel like we lost."

Confusing? Apparently not for the Lions, who won their last four games of the 1978 season — they failed to make the playoffs with a 7-7-2 record — and now are undefeated five games into the 1979 season.

In an Eastern Football Conference game, meanwhile, Montreal Alouettes scored the game's only two touchdowns in defeating the winless Winnipeg Blue Bombers 25-10 in an interlocking game at Montreal.

The Lions mounted a fierce pass rush in Vancouver and sacked Edmonton quarterbacks Tom Wilkinson and Warren Moon six times, with ends Drew Taylor and Louie Richardson getting two sacks each. Edmonton had averaged 41 points a game in its first three starts.

"We had a tough time keeping Moon from rolling out," said the boisterous Taylor, "and it really helped to have Louie back in the lineup.

"Wilkinson just goes down on the turf when he's trapped, but Moon is something else when he scrambles."

Moon replaced Wilkinson early in the game after Wilkinson sustained an ankle injury when rushed hard by the Lions, who also got sacks from tackle Rick Goltz and linebacker Ron Moorhouse.

Moon threw a 24-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Waddell Smith and running back Jim Germany rambled three yards for the other Edmonton touchdown. Dave Cutler converted both, but didn't get a chance to attempt any field goals.

Jerry Tagge fired a 16-yard scoring pass to Leon Bright for B.C.'s only major and Lui Passaglia got the other eight points on field goals of 24 and 46 yards, a 53-yard punt single and a conversion.

Edmonton twice had seven-point leads on the Lions, but B.C. kept battling back despite a lack of offence. Tagge was replaced briefly at quarterback in the second half by reserve Carlos Brown, who was just as unsuccessful.

The game ended with an exciting exchange of punts between Passaglia and Hank Ilesic of the Eskimos. Passaglia punted 48 yards to the Edmonton 38, from where Ilesic returned the kick 70 yards.

Passaglia bobbled the ball at the B.C. two-yard line, but managed to bounce the ball out of bounds as time ran out.

"I was confused for a moment and just tried to get the ball out of bounds," said the CFL's leading scorer with 62 points.

Edmonton had 18 first downs and a net offence of 224 yards after being thrown for 76 yards in team losses. B.C. had just 11 first downs and 211 yards net offence.

Montreal moved into first place in the EFC with a 3-2 record, two points ahead of both Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts, with a sound defensive effort against Winnipeg, now 0-4.

David Green rambled 17 yards for a touchdown on the last play of the third quarter before 41,232 Montreal fans, breaking a 7-7 tie, and Joe Barnes hit wide receiver Bob Gaddis with a 17-yard scoring pass in the final quarter.

Don Sweet kicked field goals of 39, 45 and 28 yards for Montreal, a pair of converts and a 41-yard single. Punter Wally Buono added a 47-yard single for the Als.

Bernie Ruoff accounted for all the Winnipeg scoring with field goals of 19, 42 and 48 yards and a 40-yard single. The Bombers had a touchdown by running back Larry Washington called back because of a holding penalty.

Big, early starts work for Mussels

Strike hard, strike quickly.

Mussels swept their Northwest Baseball League series from the Ems by doing just that in all three games at Royal Athletic Park, the latest being Tuesday's 13-8 triumph.

In all three games, the Victorians rocked their slumping rivals from the Southern Division in the first inning.

Tuesday, first baseman Emil Drzayich enabled Mussels to stick to the pattern with a booming, three-run homer. And the Mussels were off and running.

Victoria jumped off to 2-0 leads in two previous games. And, all in all, the Mussels out-scored Eugene 12-1 in the first three innings of the series.

Drzayich, handcuffed by Eugene pitching in the first two games, came back with a vengeance by going five-for-five to drive in five runs. The homer was Big D's eighth of the season.

John Caraher took the victory, his fourth, although he gave way to Roy Moretti in the sixth. It was Moretti's 31st appearance for Mussels in 49 games.

Caraher's six-inning stint was a welcome one for manager Bill Bryck. Illness and minor ailments have thinned Victoria's pitching ranks as the team moved away for an eight-game road trip that starts tonight in Medford.

Catcher Gary Ledbetter and pitcher Randy Holt are suffering with the flu. Tom Candiotti, who was scheduled to be Tuesday's starting pitcher, suffered an ankle injury. In addition, outfielder Nick Belmonte is recovering from a more serious ankle injury (but is scheduled to return in a few days), utilityman John Frietas jammed a thumb and outfielder Chris Gandy is bothered by a sore arm.

Bryck describes the health situation as pesky rather than serious but admits it may force some "unwanted juggling" during the next few days.

Burrards triumph in overtime battle

With two well-rested goalkeepers in the bank, Victoria Shamrocks are prepared to take on New Westminster Salmonbellies tonight at Memorial Arena.

The opening game of the best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association playoff semi-final is scheduled to start at 8.

Both veteran Larry Smeltzer and sophomore Scott Marshall are prepared but coach Bill Munroe isn't expected to name the starting netminder until tonight.

Vancouver led 5-3 by the end of the first period but the teams were tied 9-9 at the end of the second, and 15-15 at the end of the third.

Salmonbellies get victory as brawl shortens game

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies doubled Richmond Roadrunners 10-5 Tuesday in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League semi-final playoff game cut short by a third-period brawl.

Both benches cleared with 2:42 remaining in regulation time and the fisticuffs were enough to convince the referee to call the game, handing the Salmonbellies the win in the first game of the best-of-seven series.

Saanich bantams both suffer losses

LADNER (CP) — Vancouver, Brampton and Peterborough were tied Tuesday for the "A" division lead after two days of the national bantam lacrosse tournament.

All three had two wins and no losses in the eight-team division, one of three in which 28 teams from across Canada are competing.

In games Tuesday, Vancouver inched past Clarkson, Ont., 10-9 after one period of overtime; Brampton topped Coquitlam 11-10 and Peterborough defeated Saanich, 14-10.

Richmond, Whitby, Ont., and Edmonton were tied for first in the 12-team "B" division with two points each.

Richmond routed Surrey, 12-3; Whitby dropped Vancouver 11-10 and Edmonton nipped Saanich, 10-9.

In the eight-team "C" division, North Delta, Kitimat and Saskatoon are deadlocked in first place with four points each.

The week-long tournament ends Saturday when the top two teams in each division play a championship final in nearby Delta.

Alfons Mayer tops riflemen

EDMONTON (CP) — Alfons Mayer of Kitchener, Ont., won the international-style prone-rifle event with 2,377 out of a possible 2,400 points Tuesday during the first day of the 1979 Canadian small-bore rifle championships.

The Ontario team was the top club in the prone-rifle event while the Alberta team won provincial honors.

Starting pitcher's injury opens up cans of worms

By Canadian Press

If the opposing pitcher is left-handed — Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, for example — the manager is likely to stack his attack with right-handed batters.

Everything would have gone without a hitch, except Caldwell didn't pitch. He warmed up, but after the Brewers batted in the first, Milwaukee right-hander Jim Slaton took the mound.

Caldwell, tackled by New York's Reggie Jackson in a game 11 days earlier, claimed a rib cage injury, and Weaver's protest was announced long before the Brewers beat his Orioles, 7-5.

Weaver insisted Caldwell was required to face at least one batter, but plate umpire Larry Barnett ruled that Caldwell, who had not pitched since the wrestling match with Jackson, had reinjured himself and could be replaced.

"Who's to say if the pitcher's hurt or not?" asked Weaver. "The umpires took Bamberger's word for it and never asked Caldwell to throw another pitch. They're opening up another can of worms."

One his best pitchers, Jim Palmer, has been on the injured list since July 16, but Weaver said Tuesday night he might reinstate his right-hander as starting pitcher every night.

"It might happen 47 straight times," said Weaver. "But Jim's arm has been tender, so who's going to argue with him if he can't pitch? Maybe, every fourth day, he'll stay out there."

Slaton lasted five innings and departed with a 5-4 lead.

In other AL games, Boston Red Sox bombed Cleveland Indians 12-3, Oakland A's upended California Angels 9-5, Minnesota Twins trimmed Seattle Mariners 5-2, Chicago White Sox downed New York Yankees 9-5, Toronto Blue Jays edged Kansas City Royals 3-2, and Detroit Tigers swept Texas Rangers, 3-1 and 8-2.

In the National League, Atlanta Braves edged Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Chicago Cubs clobbered Pittsburgh 15-2, St. Louis swept a pair from New York Mets 9-2 and 2-1, Los Angeles clipped Houston 10-8, San Francisco nipped San Diego 3-2 and Philadelphia slipped by Montreal 4-2.

The game turned out to be run-of-the-mill for the Brewers and Orioles — five home runs, three of them by Milwaukee. In their 11 meetings this season, the teams have combined for 37 homers.

Sixto Lezcano, Gorman Thomas and Dick Davis each hit two-run shots for the Brewers, who had lost seven of their last eight games. Lee May and Pat Kelly connected for the Orioles, with Kelly's blast marking his third of the year as a pinch-hitter.

Davis's homer, after he had fouled off two pitches while attempting to bunt, snapped a 5-5 tie in the eighth, sending Baltimore to its third consecutive loss.

They can talk without heat

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey Players Association and team owners held meetings which wound up Tuesday and discussed questions such as what happens to players assigned to the minor leagues, free agent status, international competition, and compulsory use of helmets.

Although the meetings really produced little new, Alan Eagleson, executive director of the players association said they were a success if only "when these two groups can meet for two days without raised voices or bad tempers they've got to be a success."

A tentative schedule for this winter with the Soviet Union Red Army team and the Moscow Dynamos has been established between Dec. 26 and Jan. 10.

The army team will meet New York Rangers, New York Islanders, Quebec Nordiques, Buffalo Sabres and Montreal Canadiens while the Dynamos will play Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Vancouver Canucks and Washington Capitals.

Eagleson said there could be changes as players such as Toronto's Darryl Sittler would like to see action against the Russians. "Ballard (owner Harold Ballard) and Imlach (general manager Punch Imlach) are not really exuding enthusiasm about a game, but the Russians are most anxious to play both Toronto and Montreal for they still think of them as Canadian hockey," Eagleson said after the meetings.

Both Eagleson and NHL president John Zeigler said the question of equalization in the free agent situation, where a team has to compensate the team the player comes from, still had a lot left for discussion.

An agreement was reached that players sent to the minors should get his hotel bill paid for 28 days or get $20 a day expenses, Eagleson said teams often refused to compensate players.

There was nothing in the book until now.

And both sides agreed that helmets must be worn by players who signed professional contracts after June 1, 1979.

Munson's pact to pay widow million dollars

NEW YORK (AP) — Catcher Thurman Munson's contract with New York Yankees will pay his widow, Diane, $1 million over the next three years.

Munson, killed in the crash of his private plane last Thursday, was signed by the American League baseball team through 1981, receiving $400,000 a year. The contract was guaranteed and did not include the usual clause that absolves a team from payments in the event of death while flying a private plane.

"The contract is clear on this subject," said Dick Moss, Munson's lawyer. "I'm sure there will be no problem. The Yankees honor their agreements."

Lakers claim Rocket to blame

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers for Los Angeles Lakers, defendants in a multi-million dollar damage suit, are attempting to prove that injuries to Houston Rocket basketball star Rudy Tomjanovich were caused by the action of another Rocket player.

A five-man, one-woman federal court jury viewed — in black-and-white and color, in normal and slow-motion — a film of the National Basketball Association game between the Lakers and Rockets Dec. 9, 1977, in which Tomjanovich was hit in the face by the Lakers' Kermit Washington.

Defense attorney Robert Dunn told the jury that before Tomjanovich was hit, Rocket center Kelvin Kunnert had given Washington an elbow in the face.

A fight erupted, with the film showing Kunnert hit by Washington, who later was suspended for 60 days and fined $10,000 by the NBA commissioner Lawence O'Brien — both league records.

Kunnert, now a teammate of Washington on San Diego Clippers, said: "I never threw an elbow. Washington was holding onto my trunks during a fast break and I was just trying knock his hands away."

Earlier, Houston forward Robert Reid viewed the film and said it appeared to him that Kunnert had swung an elbow at Washington.

A Houston surgeon testified the face of Tomjanovich had to be rebuilt like "a jigsaw puzzle ... like putting a cracked egg-shell back together with Scotch Tape."

Daniel C. Walker, an oral and face surgeon, said he had "never seen such damage made by a bare human fist."

The Rockets are seeking $1.4 million from the Lakers for the loss of Tomjanovich during most of the 1977-1978 season, and Tomjanovich is asking an unspecified amount, but more than $1 million.

Fools still lighting fires despite extreme hazard

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It goes to show there is no limit to stupidity . . . While camping on a gravel bar along the Nitinat River over the long weekend, we observed and heard of several other occupants of the area lighting campfires — despite a large sign on the turnoff road saying campfires weren't permitted and in spite of a general campfire ban on the south end of Vancouver Island . . . Luckily one individual took note of some vocal protests from our site and immediately doused his fire . . . The others were presumably taken care of by the frequent MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products fire patrols in the area . . . The bush is tinder dry right now and any dew that happens to accumulate during the night evaporates quickly in the hot weather . . . Under such conditions it doesn't take much to start a fire — we have ample visible evidence of that fact right now on the Malahat . . . Sure, a campfire is part of the camping experience and this writer missed having one both nights we were out . . . But ignoring posted signs and Forest Service directives when the fire hazard is extreme can only lead to curtailed priviledges . . . We all lose out because of the thoughtless actions of a few . . . And, if you happen to spot a fire, remember the toll-free number to report . . . Dial "O" and ask for Zenith 5555.

Speaking about Mac-Blo . . . They've updated their series of maps covering operations on Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlottes . . . Federal fisheries has announced two sports fishing regulation changes . . . Until midnight Oct. 31, waters inside or westerly of a line between white fishing boundary signs located on either side of the entrance to Nahmint Bay and all tidal and non-tidal portions of the Nahmint River are closed to salmon fishing by any means . . . This ban is to protect the Nahmint River chinook stocks . . . Perhaps hitting a little closer to home are new shrimp limits . . . Sports fishermen are now limited (except at his or her permanent dwelling) to twelve kilograms of shrimp in the shell or four kilograms of shrimp meat.

Lancers spoilers during Rogue finale

By Canadian Press

A malfunctioning scoreboard clock and a contested offside call highlighted a turbulent home season finale for Memphis as the Rogues lost 4-3 to Rochester Lancers in one of two North American Soccer League contests Tuesday night.

The final goal, by Fred Grgurev, came when one of the two scoreboard clocks indicated time had run out. But referee Marco Dorantes ruled the ball still in play.

In the only other match, Los Angeles Aztecs humbled Seattle Sounders, 7-1.

Rookie Branko Segota, an 18-year-old striker with 11 goals in 11 games, scored two goals and was credited with two assists in a victory that kept the Lancers, 14-15, in the running for a wild-card playoff spot. The Rogues, 6-23, maintain the dubious honor of being the league's weakest sister.

Segota scored two first-half goals to give the Lancers a 2-0 lead at the half. Ibraim Silva booted one in at 56:25 to give Rochester a seemingly insurmountable lead.

But the Rogues, urged on by 7,264 fans, roared back with three goals in less than 10 minutes of the second period.

The offside call, made by Dorantes, nullified a Rogues' goal at 73:01 that would have given Memphis a 4-3 lead. It came when Smillie fired a low shot past Rochester goalkeeper Shep Messing.

Chris Dangerfield scored three goals for the first time in his NASL career and Johann Cruyff added two more to lead the Los Angeles rout over Seattle.

Five Island soccer players on Student Games squad

Victoria Selects triumph

Victoria batted first and reached 207 runs for six wickets with Tim Lord setting the pace with 70. Richard English added 32 and Don Hughes contributed 26, not out.

Ken Aziz came up with 42 and Elvin Carter scored 41 as West Indies was all out for 181.

In league play at the weekend, Incogs topped Nanaimo by five wickets Sunday at St. Michael's University School and Albion downed Castaways by four wickets Saturday at Beacon Hill Park.

Nanaimo reached 100 as David Irwin topped batsmen with 54 runs. Dave Grant set the pace for Incog bowlers by toppling four wickets for the loss of 21 runs while T. Walton took three for 17.

Incogs then replied with 103 for five. Grant scored 41 and Jeremy Goodwin added 24 as Irwin took three for 30.

Irish sailors still lead

COWES, Isle of Wight (AP) — Although two American yachts finished 1-2 in Tuesday's Admiral's Cup race, the top three positions in the 19-nation standings remained unchanged, with Ireland clinging to the lead followed by Australia and the United States.

The race, fourth of the five-race series, was another inshore event, staged in blustery and overcast conditions with visibility occasionally reduced by drizzle.

First on corrected time in the 32-mile race was the 45-foot U.S. yacht Williwaw, owned by Seymour Sinnet and skippered by Dennis Conner of San Diego.

In 34th position was Magistri, out of Toronto and skippered by Charley Bentley, and in 36th, Evergreen, skippered by Don Green from Hamilton.

After four races, the provisional points table now has Ireland first with 649 points, Australia with 637, the U.S. 635; Hong Kong 575; Italy 539 and France 516. Britain, holders of the trophy won in 1977, moved up one place to seventh with 515 points.

The standings are subject to the outcome of protests.

Three of the protests are against Australia's top boat, Police Car, involved in at least one collision after the yachts had returned from a general recall.

A crewman from Police Car was catapulted into the sea and suffered a broken arm when the boat was in collision with Brazil's Indigo.

Indigo was forced to retire with a gaping hole in its bow. The accident meant that Brazil is without a boat.

Wrestling executive takes over as Western Hockey League head

EDMONTON (CP) — David Descent of Ottawa has been selected to succeed Ed Chynoweth as president of the Western Hockey League.

Descent, 31, will become the executive director in charge of the WHL office, Brian Shaw, league board chairman, announced Tuesday.

Descent takes office Aug. 20. He's the former executive director of the Canadian Amateur Wrestling Association and has been involved in hockey for many years as a player, official and administrator.

"Dave certainly appears to be the person we want, and I am confident that he will be able to fill the void left by Ed's leaving," Shaw said in a news release. "He has a proven record as a top flight sports administator."

Shaw added that Del Wilson of Regina, who declined to take the president's postition, will remain in charge of referees and discipline for the 1979-1980 season, working closely with Descent.

Butlers, Strathcona pass semi-final test

Both consolation semi-final series in the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League were completed Tuesday night at Hyacinth Park.

Butler Brothers defeated Esquimalt Combos 3-1 to sweep their best-of-three series in two straight while Strathcona Stingers downed Capital City Pirates by the same count in the third and deciding game of their playoff.

Gina Olsen pitched a four-hitter for Butlers and Diana Underwood managed three hits in three trips to the plate. Bea Hendry connected for a single in the fifth inning to drive in both the tying and winning runs.

Bev Karpiuk scattered six hits for the Strathcona victory and Vicki Walker went two-for-three to spark Stingers at the plate.

Five league teams — Bemister's, Island Dryco Breakers, Pirates, Esquimalt Combos and Butlers — will compete this weekend for the South Island senior "C" crown.

Nets sign Natt to rich pact

MOONACHIE, N.J. (AP) — Forward Calvin Natt, who coach Kevin Loughery describes as a compact model of Willis Reed, has signed a four-year National Basketball Association contract estimated to be worth $800,000 with New Jersey Nets.

Natt, a 6-foot-6, 222-pound musclemen from Northeastern Louisiana, was the Nets first of two opening round draft picks, and the eighth selection over all in last month's NBA draft.

Big third-wicket stand foils England's hopes

LONDON (Reuter) — A 210-run third-wicket stand between Dilip Vengsarkar and Gundappa Viswanath foiled England's hopes of winning the second cricket test at Lord's Tuesday.

When the match ended, India had made 318 for four in its second innings — five runs away from avoiding an innings defeat.

England's cause was not helped by the weather. Almost two hours of play was lost to bad light and rain.

Vengsarkar and Viswanath, who had put on 97 Monday, carried their stand beyond tea before being parted. Vengsarkar made 103 and Viswanath 113.

England goes into the third test at Headingley, Leeds, on Aug. 16 leading 1-0 in the four-match series.

Oilers trade Joe Micheletti

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers today announced a National Hockey League trade that sent forward-defenceman Joe Micheletti to St. Louis Blues for defenceman Risto Siltanen and centre Tom Roulston. Micheletti, an American scored 28 goals and collected 67 assists in two World Hockey Association seasons with the Oilers. Edmonton had been unable to agree on contract terms with Micheletti.

Athletics capture Kelowna tourney

KELOWNA — Victoria Elks-Athletics, South Vancouver Island's representatives in this year's Brisith Columbia senior "B" championships, downed the host Kelowna team 3-1 Monday to win an invitational men's softball tournament.

The Victoria club defeated defending champion Fraser Arms of Vancouver 6-1, Rutland 5-4, Port Coquitlam 5-2 and Kelowna 9-0 to reach the final of the double-knockout tourney.

Bob Wilson of Elks-A's, this year's batting champion in Victoria's Stuffy McGinis League, was named the top batter after chalking up a .641 average and was picked as the all-star centre-fielder.

Clubmates Bob Gray and Ray Beveridge were selected as the all-star catcher and pitcher, respectively, and Wayne Forlund of Seaboard was selected as the top third baseman.

Joe toughens conflict rules

OTTAWA (UPC) — Joe Clark's ministers may not run a business, practise a profession or direct large-scale financial affairs while they hold office, and they will not be allowed to join the boards of Crown corporations for two years after they leave the cabinet.

Those rules were part of a set of guidelines, announced last week, which were made public Tuesday by Prime Minister Clark's office.

The guidelines are intended to "conserve and enhance public confidence and trust in government."

Ministers got their copies of the rules last week. They were told that assets such as publicly traded securities or speculative investments must be sold within four months of appointment to cabinet or placed in a blind trust.

Personal assets such as homes or summer cottages, savings bonds and pension holdings were exempt from the new rules.

Clark's guidelines for the first time included ministers' immediate families — spouses and children. Gifts to ministers of family members of more than $100 must be disclosed within 30 days.

In his letters to individual cabinet members, Clark, stating the principles of his guidelines, said: "Ministers must perform and appear to perform their official responsibilities and arrange their private affairs in a manner that will conserve and enhance public confidence and trust in government and that will prevent conflicts of interest from arising.

"Ministers must not take advantage of their official positions, or of information obtained in the course of their official duties that is not generally available to the public."

Dentist's handy technique beats lawsuit

OTTAWA (CP) — A lawsuit against a dentist who used a controversial technique to control a troublesome child patient has been dismissed in small claims court.

Judge Herbert W. Pearl said in a judgment released Tuesday there was no proof of negligence against Dr. Bernard Larouche, although his patient suffered facial bruises that remained for eight days after the treatment.

The technique, known as the hand-over-mouth-exercise, involves the dentist placing one hand over the mouth of the child and sometimes pinching shut the child's nostrils with the other hand for a few seconds.

Marcel and Ghislaine Lafleche of nearby Hull, Que., filed a lawsuit against Larouche in May when their daughter Annie, 4, left the doctor's office with facial bruises after having a cavity filled last October. The case went to court in May.

Dr. Larouche and Mrs. Lafleche agreed the dentist had explained the technique and the possibility that bruises could result before she agreed to the procedure.

RED DEER (CP) — The financially-troubled Uncle Ben's Brewery in this central Alberta city is up for sale. The brewery was listed with a national real estate firm last week at an asking price of $12 million.

Uncle Ben's, owned by Ben Ginter of Prince George, B.C., has been battling for a larger share of the beer market in Alberta against the nationally-owned breweries. A strike at Molson Alberta Brewery Ltd. in Edmonton helped it increase its draft sales but Alberta liquor control board manager Joe Forgione says it won't be allowed to continue to sell a large quota.

Last month Uncle Ben's managed to settle an attempted bank foreclosure on the brewery.

Ex-MP appointed

OTTAWA (CP) — Rob Parker, a defeated Toronto Progressive Conservative MP, has been named special assistant to Finance Minister John Crosbie.

Parker is a former broadcast journalist who also has appeared in a number of television commercials.

Butt out, students

TOKYO (AP) — China is beginning a national campaign to warn its 900 million citizens of the risks of smoking, Radio Peking announced. The broadcast said the government will outlaw smoking by students and in public places, including theatres, hospitals and on public transportation.

Canadian content lacks $: CBC chief

OTTAWA (CP) — Government restraint has forced the Crown-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. to slow its development of new Canadian programs, CBC president A. W. Johnson said Tuesday.

"We have tried to cope with the budget cuts in such a way as to minimize the effect on our listeners and viewers," Johnson said in the CBC annual report.

"But the fact remains that reduced expenditures will slow our progress toward the fuller reflection of Canada in Canadian broadcasting."

The previous Liberal government ordered a $70.9 million reduction in the CBC's projected budget for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1980.

The CBC has $477 million for operating expenditures and $45 million for capital expenditures — a total of $522 million — in the current fiscal year.

Operating funds will be reduced by $22.3 million and CBC staff will be reduced by 500, largely through attrition, by March 31, 1980. There were about 12,000 persons on CBC staff in March, 1979.

Johnson said funds budgeted for improvement of service, such as increased Canadian programming and enriched regional and local broadcasting, have been cut by $23.6 million.

"This means that in program development for the future, we must mark time in 1979-80."

In the 1978-79 fiscal year, program and distribution costs amounted to $561.2 million, representing 87 per cent of the corporation's total operating expenditures of $649.2 million.

Johnson said the CBC invests heavily in Canadian programming, but cannot "meet the onslaught of American programming all by itself."

He called for more and better Canadian programming by private television and cable industries to offset the effects of U.S.-made programs.

Johnson said broadcasters, regulators and legislators have an obligation to "support our broadcasting system in the interest of all Canadians.

"If we neglect to do this, we may, in time, no longer know who we are."

Johnson said in the last fall season, almost two-thirds of television programs available in English Canada were of foreign — primarily U.S. — origin.

English-speaking Canadians spent almost 75 per cent of their viewing time watching foreign programs and French-speaking viewers spent 48 per cent of their viewing time watching foreign programs.

OTTAWA (CP) — More than $10 million was awarded to 152 performing arts organizations by the Canada Council at its last meeting in June, it was announced Tuesday.

Twelve dance organizations received a total of $780,000 in grants. The largest grant of $135,000 went to the Groupe de dance Entre-Six of Montreal. The Anna Wyman Dance Theatre foundation of Vancouver was awarded $120,000.

The largest of the music grants, $802,000, was awarded to the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Forty-four music grants totalling $4,371,103 were distributed.

Theatre organizations received $4,961,500. The Theatre du Nouveau Monde of Montreal received $455,000, the largest of the 96 grants awarded in this category.

49% favor more refugees

TORONTO (CP) — Almost half of Canadian adults surveyed approved of a general increase in the number of Vietnamese refugees admitted to Canada, a Gallup poll shows.

About 49 per cent of those surveyed approved of an increase while seven per cent gave qualified approval. About 38 per cent disapproved and six per cent had no opinion.

Results are based on 1,000 personal home interviews with adults 18 years and over, conducted in early July, about two weeks before the government announced that up to 50,000 refugees would be admitted by the end of 1980. A sample this size should not vary more than four percentage points and is accurate 19 in 20 times.

The question asked in the poll was:

"As you may know, many refugees from Vietnam — sometimes called the boat people — are temporarily located in Malaysia and other Indochina countries, but are seeking permanent relocation elsewhere. In your opinion should Canada allow more of these refugees to relocate in Canada or not?"

In Quebec, 59 per cent approved of an increase of refugees coming into Canada while 41 per cent approved in the Prairies.

About 53 per cent of those surveyed in the largest cities approved of the increase, compared with 42 per cent in rural communities.

And of those aged 18 to 29, 52 per cent voiced their approval of increased admittance, compared with 40 per cent of those surveyed who were 50 and older.

LITTLE GUY MAKES GOOD.

Chevy Chevette Now Canada's Best Selling Small Car.

Chevrolet is very proud to announce that in 1979* the Chevy Chevette became Canada's No. 1 small car. And for darn good reason. You see, when Chevrolet decided to build a small economy car, it drew on years and years of experience to create its design. And now, after less than 4 years, the Chevy Chevette has proven itself to be the No. 1 value car that it was designed to be. We knew you'd recognize one finely built, solid little character when you saw it.

VALUE

The Chevette has a personality just loaded with standard features. And we knew you'd welcome its low price tag. A price that includes so many features, even the competition had to sit up and take notice. Plus with three models to choose from: (a 4-door Hatchback rings in at $4,750, the 2-door Hatchback Coupe at †$4,610, and the nifty little 2-door Scooter at ‡$4,019), we knew you'd be hard pressed not to find one exactly right for your individual style.

FACTS

Now when we talk about Chevy Chevette's solid character, we're talking about a 1.6 litre engine with a 4-speed standard transmission that will give you an estimated fuel consumption/economy rating of 7.0 litres per 100 kilometres or if you prefer 40 MPG, reliable front disc/rear drum brakes, positive rack-and-pinion steering, sturdy double-panel body construction, sound-deadening acoustical treatment, body side mouldings, extensive corrosion-resistant treatments, a high energy ignition system, radial tires and believe it, even more.

COMFORTS

And when we talk about personality, the little Chevette really lets you sit back and relax. Just get behind the sports steering wheel and notice all that nice cut pile carpeting under foot. Not to mention fingertip control of turn signals, headlight dimmer, wipers, washers; AM radio, flow through ventilation, cigarette lighter and reclining bucket seats. All standard equipment.

MANOEUVREABILITY

And if you like to be close to where the action is, this little guy was built just for you. The Chevy Chevette can manoeuvre through the thick of it in comfort and style. In fact, it can turn you around almost as quickly as you can change your mind. Yes we knew it was all just a matter of time before the little Chevy Chevette would find its proper place in the sun, but that's not going to stop us from thanking you for recognizing it so soon. Get into a Chevy Chevette. Canada's No. 1 small car. It'll do you proud too.

New vehicle warranty 12 months/20,000 kilometres. 3-yr. perforation from corrosion warranty. Available Continuous Protection Plan.

Just about anything 'a secret'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Official Secrets Act, aimed at espionage, is drafted so broadly that it could be held to prohibit public servants from telling the public anything, a study done for the Law Reform Commission of Canada says.

R. T. Franson of Vancouver, who did the study, made public Tuesday, says the oath of secrecy public servants must take under the Public Service Employment Act is another obstacle to informing the public.

Under the oath, public servants swear not to disclose anything they learn as a result of their job unless they have "due authority" to do so.

"Unfortunately, no clear specification of authority for disclosure apears to exist in most departments or agencies," says Franson.

"The public servant is left to make his own decision respecting disclosure and must therefore face the risk that he will, on review, be found to be without authority to disclose if the information proves embarrassing."

Franson, who studied public access to information held by government agencies, says he was unable to co-ordinate his study with one being done by the former Liberal government because the government study was kept confidential.

He concludes that the public currently has no right to information held by agencies such as the National Parole Board, the National Energy Board and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, although some of these agencies volunteer such information.

Even people appearing before such agencies on matters of interest to them, such as licence applications, had trouble getting information about the policies and practices of the agencies.

Section 28 of the Federal Court Act was "notoriously unclear" and court decisions on whether agencies had to release information had left the situation fuzzy.

Franson recommended that the public have a right to any information in the files of administrative agencies, as long as the information could be released without creating harm. He proposed exemptions to disclosure that would cover data relating to the security of the state, international relations, relations with the provinces, pending negotiations, cabinet debates and policies, staff advice, valuable commercial information, and personal information.

Parties appearing before such agencies or affected by their decisions would have a right to information covered by the exemptions "unless it can be shown that release would cause specific harm." Burden of proof would be on the person seeking confidentiality.

He also recommended that staff manuals, directives and other interpretative materials be made public, and that agencies be required to identify, index and publish such material. Franson said it is almost impossible to find a lot of his material at present, especially outside Ottawa.

Franson is an administrative law professor at the University of British Columbia.

The Law Reform Commission, in a foreword to his study, said it is committed to an open administrative process in government. It didn't necessarily share Franson's views although they would help shape the commission's proposals for reform of administrative law and procedures, the commission said.

Canada sliding into slump?

TORONTO (UPC) — A major Canadian bank says Canada is following the United States into a recession, with high inflation and mortgage interest rates pointing the way.

The Bank of Montreal said Tuesday in its monthly Business Review the accelerating American inflation rate in 1978 and sharp rises in interest rates were manifestations of stresses leading to economic slowdown.

The bank said that even with the employment rate at peak levels "it would apear that the U.S. economy has gone into recession.

"Economic growth in the first quarter of 1979 was quite low — an annual rate of 1.1 per cent.

"Bad weather was widely blamed for the slow growth but a rebound failed to occur in the second quarter and economic growth in fact declined at a 3.3 percent rate."

In Canada the main indicators have followed the same trend "except that the drop-off in the growth rates appears to have occurred somewhat later.

"The same story of slowdown or emerging recession is told in the key monthly indicators ... for both Canada and the United States," said the review.

The bank said a surge in Canadian retail sales occurred despite declining real income. However, the surge was possibly caused by consumers dipping into their savings accounts.

The gasoline shortage was cited as an important factor in sagging U.S. car sales which were down "a whopping 7 ½ per cent." The bank said low housing starts, high mortgage interest rates and inflationary house prices were other significant indicators.

"In fact, in some states, because interest rates are so high, usury laws have actually prevented the making of mortgage loans," the bank said.

The bank said a fall-off in industrial production, decline in housing starts and an increase in imports over exports indicate the Canadian economy is following its American counterpart.

Test results today

TORONTO (UPC) — Blood test results are expected later today to tell medical authorities whether seven more hospital patients have Legionnaire's disease.

Preliminary test results released by Ontario's Ministry of Health bacteriology laboratory Tuesday afternoon showed two patients at Humber Memorial Hospital have the disease.

"The two patients are a 72-year-old woman in fair condition who is in isolation and a 51-year-old man in stable though serious condition in the hospital's intensive care unit," the hospital statement said.

A test on lung tissue obtained from the autopsy done on Orin Kerr, 26, who died in Humber's emergency unit Aug. 4, was negative.

"This does not however indicate that he did not have Legionnaire's disease," the statement said.

Mike Muise, 23, an outpatient released from Humber last week after responding well to the antibiotic tetracycline had a clear chest X-ray Tuesday but a blood sample taken from the man was sent to the laboratory for testing as a precaution, a Humber spokeswoman said.

Results were inconclusive on blood samples from two patients at Northwestern General Hospital.

The disease got its name in 1976 when 29 people died and 151 were hospitalized after contracting the flu-like condition at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia. U.S. scientists have isolated 35 different strains from the four bacterial groups known to cause the disease.

Steel 'halo' holds broken neck still

Many injured by diving into shallows

TORONTO (CP) — There's a disturbing number of diving accidents leaving many victims, most of them young men, paralysed for life, a Toronto doctor says.

Dr. Charles Tator, a neurosurgeon who is head of the spinal cord injury unit at Sunnybrook Medical Centre, said diving accidents, the chief cause of spinal cord damage from sports injuries, are common, especially so this summer.

Last year, six persons with spinal cord injuries were admitted to Sunnybrook. This year there have been seven.

Hospital records show the typical diving injury occurs when young people are swimming at a pool or lake, usually drinking beer and horsing around shortly before dusk. Someone decides to have a last swim to cool off.

"He dives in off the edge of a pool or runs for a dive into a lake, into too-shallow water, hits his head on the bottom and breaks his neck," Tator said.

Some never walk again and many spend months in hospitals such as Sunnybrook for treatment.

Angelo St. Jean, 18, of Smooth Rock Falls, Ont., was transferred to Sunnybrook this week after a diving accident near his home.

While running along a beach last Sunday, he decided to take one last dip. He dove into less than a metre of water, breaking his neck and paralysing the left side of his body.

"If my girl-friend's uncle hadn't pulled me out of the lake for another 30 seconds, I'd be dead," St. Jean said from his hospital bed. "I was starting to swallow a lot of water."

Doctors say it will be three months before they know whether St. Jean will recover from his paralysis and be able to return to his truck-driving job.

'Man of Quebec' glorified

QUEBEC (CP) — History may glorify Greek and Roman civilizations, but at a cost of $25 to $30 millions, the Quebec government plans to immortalize Quebec civilization.

Denis Vaugeois, Quebec's minister of cultural affairs, reiterated this week that the Quebec Museum, located near the city's Plains of Abraham, will be expanded and remodelled in the 1980s to single out "Man of Quebec."

Vaugeois said a government study entitled "The Quebec Museum To Be" emphasizes the necessity of creating "a big national museum in Quebec."

But the minister insisted that the theme of the expanded museum will not be solely nationalistic.

"Man of Quebec," the study states, "is the man who chose to live here, or who settled here after circumstances brought him here, convinced that life would be good here.

"That was the case of the wandering Asiatic centuries ago . . . the Frenchmen in search of the Orient in the 16th century . . . and the Englishmen exploring the continent conquered by their armies."

The government first announced plans two years ago to expand the museum to 240,000 square feet from 40,000 square feet. Vaugeois said construction work would not begin until the end of 1980, and interested groups would be consulted in the meantime.

Cowboys post reward

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Rodeo Cowboys Association has posted a $10,000 reward for discovery of the Piper Cherokee 235 which went missing over southern Oregon May 22 with four Canadian cowboys aboard.

About half of a $200,000 search fund collected by the CRCA remains available but will not be used until this fall when leaves drop from trees and make sighting a downed airplane more likely, CRCA spokesman Jim Freeman said.

Canadian bullriding champion Brian Claypool of Saskatoon; Gary Logan of Sundre, Alta.; Calvin Bunney of Dutchess, Alta; and, Lee Coleman of Pierceland, Sask., were aboard the aircraft, last seen at Salem, Ore., where it was refuelled for a flight to Santa Clara, Calif.

Inuit rights claims not a court issue

TORONTO (CP) — The sensitive issue of extinguishing aboriginal rights is one that should be decided by Parliament and not by Canadian courts, a lawyer suggested Tuesday during a landmark native rights case.

Aubrey Golden, representing 113 Inuit residents of Baker Lake, N.W.T., told a federal court justice that the Canadian government has not turned its mind to the question of extinguishing aboriginal rights and should not ask the courts to make the decision.

The Inuit residents, in a fight to preserve a centuries-old tradition of hunting caribou, their main food source, are seeking an injunction to prohibit the federal government from issuing mining permits in the Baker Lake area.

While they seek to establish Inuit ownership of the land, the federal government and several foreign and Canadian-owned mining companies argue there are no aboriginal rights and the government is free to issue land use permits.

"As far back as you go you don't see anything but, basically, Inuit occupancy," Golden argued, adding that Inuit were in the Baker Lake area before the first Hudson's Bay Co. explorers arrived in 1762.

Golden urged Mr. Justice Patrick Mahoney to dismiss written arguments made by mining company lawyers who say government statutes and regulations made over the years have, in effect, extinguished aboriginal rights.

He said he will argue later this week that uranium exploration activities have infringed on Inuit hunting rights.

Inuit have testified during the trial, which started in May and was adjourned in June, that 10 years of uranium mining and exploration have disrupted traditional caribou migration patterns andd threatened their livlihood.

The Northwest Territories, formerly Rupert's Land, were reacquired in 1870 by the British government from the Hudson's Bay Co. The territory was given to Canada and included in the transfer were about 22,000 Inuit.

Golden said the Hudson's Bay Co. went to great pains when negotiating the transfer to ensure that land claims would be taken care of.

1.5-litre bottle standards alarm Canada Dry

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence's announcement of new safety standards for 1.5-litre pop bottles, coupled with an absolute ban on containers that do not meet them, has been met with silence from most industry spokesman.

But while officials with Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, 7-Up, Wilson's and Crush beverages had no comments on Lawrence's announcement Tuesday that all ultra-large bottles must now meet department tip-test standards, John Bull, president of Canada Dry called it a "punitive decision."

Lawrence, who had resisted pressure from thé Consumers' Association of Canada and MP Herb Gray (Windsor West) to ban the bottles last month, said containers that explode with enough force to send glass flying through four-sided aluminum foil shields may not be imported, sold or advertised in Canada.

But Bull said the ban, which provides $1,000 and six month jail terms for offenders, goes too far and blamed the media for hysterical over-reaction to what he called a few incidents.

"We're dealing with small numbers in terms of bottle failures," he said. "The industry has sold 350 million bottles . . . there has to be some allowable level of product failure."

Canada Dry bottles have not been marketed since early summer but were among those government researchers considered unsafe during tests conducted in June.

About 54 persons have been injured here in the past year while more than 32,000 persons in the United States have reported bottle-related injuries to hospitals since 1970.

The big bottles have a 20 per cent share of the soft-drink market and officials say a ban would mean losses of about $20 million.

Lawrence said the standards will eventually be extended to cover all pressurized glass containers and urged consumers to return any of the hazardous 1.5-litre bottles they may possess to retail stores.

The decision comes a month after retailers and bottlers were asked to take the hazardous bottles off the market voluntarily, and although Lawrence said most had complied with his request "a few have chosen to keep their products on the market . . . maintaining a severe threat to the safety of the consumer."

Coca-Cola officials were confident their product would pass the new standards, as only Coke and Schweppes soft drink bottles had explosion rates considered acceptable by the department's product safety branch researchers.

The tests in June confirmed a study by Professor David Barham of the University of Toronto whose tests showed the torpedo-shaped, narrow-necked bottles used by Pepsi, 7-Up, Royal Crown Cola, Wilson's, Canada Dry and Crush pop bottlers exploded violently when casually tipped over onto a vinyl-covered concrete floor.

Department tests also showed the bottles, which are pressurized to three-times the air pressure at sea level, could explode spontaneously.

In two of the most widely-reported accidents here, a woman at a Kitchener-Waterloo, Ont., supermarket was seriousy injured when a bottle exploded as she passed a shelf and a young Calgary child lost an eye when one exploded in his former home in Toronto.

The three-year-old's parents have said they will sue Pepsi-Cola for damages.

No blame attached in fatal bus crash

STE. HYACINTHE, Que. (UPC) — A June 9 bus crash that killed 11 senior citizens "was an accident pure and simple" and no blame should be attached, a coroner has decuded.

Coroner Stanislas Dery said Tuesday he was unable to find criminal responsibility in the accident after two days of inquest hearings in this community 30 miles northeast of Montreal.

The accident occurred when the bus, taking 49 members of a Victoriaville senior citizens' club home after a night at the races in Montreal, skidded in a curve on the Trans-Canada Highway near Ste. Hyacinthe and smashed into a concrete pillar supporting an overpass.

Dery said his formal report on the mishap, to be brought down in about a month, would urge the Quebec government to act soon on bus safety.

"I am asking the authorities to implement recommendations I already made a year ago in the St. Sauveur bus case," Dery said.

"I also want the government to act on the recommendations of the Jodouin commission into bus safety released last spring," Dery added.

That report suggested stiffer safety regulations be applied to all buses in Quebec, instead of only to school buses.

Another University of Montreal engineer, Raymond Gauvin, testified he found cracks on the lower suspension arms on both rear wheels of the bus which "were not welded properly."

The Prairies

Kris' hairy pals have eight legs

RED DEER (CP) — The most surprising thing about Kris Hollingsworth is that he appears to be so normal. Soft-spoken and gentle.

Hardly the sort of fellow who shares his bed with several tarantulas, allowing them to snuggle into his armpits for warmth.

Hollingsworth, a photographer, says he's never been bitten by his fuzzy-legged friends, who reach 20 centimetres in length and have 60-millimetre fangs.

Their venom would kill a mouse but not a human adult, he insists. Gentle pets, they bite only when provoked and snooze most of their lives away.

Hollingsworth discovered his affinity for tarantulas when using one as a prop in a blue jean advertisement.

"We placed a tarantula over the breast of a girl who was wearing a pair of jeans. We paid her an extra $100 for it."

Hollingsworth raises and breeds the insects in his apartment, allowing them to roam at will. He sells them for $25 each.

Hutterite pact discussed

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government is anxious to sign a memorandum of understanding with Hutterites in the province to clarify procedures for any future colony expansions, Rural Affairs Minister Edgar Kaeding said.

But representatives of the Hutterites said they required more time to study the proposal which they had already turned down last spring because of a lawsuit between one of the colonies and a municipality.

The statement of positions came following a meeting in Regina between elders from various Saskatchewan colonies, government representatives, Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities and Saskatchewan School Trustees Association representatives.

Prowling stinkers gassed

EDMONTON (CP) — A large number of skunks who decide to prowl in Edmonton garbage cans for food meet their end in a small gas chamber every year.

Bob Whitford, assistant city pound supervisor, said Wednesday that asphyxiating the cat-sized carnivores after enticing them into a box trap is "as humane a method as any that can be devised."

At least 80 skunks a week are asphyxiated.

Whitford described the complaint of a city woman who observed a pound worker connect a hose from the exhaust of his truck to the trap as an isolated case.

Computer models pinpoint black gold

CALGARY (CP) — On the seventh floor of the University of Calgary's Library Tower, 12 men and women are quietly attracting worldwide attention for their growing expertise in petroleum research.

The Computer Modelling Group, begun two years ago and sponsored by the university and the Alberta and federal governments, has already outgrown local computer capacity in its development of computer programs to aid oil recovery.

It has been relying upon long-distance connections to Toronto computers. But as even those become inadequate, the group has been preparing links to a giant Kansas City computer.

Meanwhile, the world scientific community has already noted the young organization's work. Scientists from the group will present a paper in September to the World Petroleum Congress in Romania and four papers later that same month to the annual meeting of U.S. petroleum engineers in Las Vegas.

Despite their small numbers, the group is one of the largest in the specialized field of using computers to simulate the effect of various methods of drawing oil from reservoirs.

In an interview, group manager Khalid Aziz, who is also a professor of chemical engineering at the university, said the Calgary group is believed to be the only non-profit organization in the world doing such work.

"We are a small company, a non-profit company, but we constitute a very large — in relative terms — reservoir simulation group," he said.

With world oil shortages and rising oil prices, more attention is being paid to elaborate methods of squeezing the most oil possible out of a given reservoir.

Aziz said the value of computer simulation lies in ensuring that the method of enhancing recovery is the best one.

Among the complex programs developed by the group are ones that simulate the effect of injecting carbon dioxide, nitrogen, polymers or steam into various types of reservoirs.

Just starting operation is a computer program that simulates in-situ combustion, a technique where part of a heavy oil reservoir is burned to heat the reservoir and make the rest of the oil flow up freely.

Aziz said running such a computer simulation might cost $100,000 but that is a small price compared with the wealth of information obtained or the $40 million-plus cost of pilot recovery projects.

The oil industry has welcomed the group's work, with about a dozen firms using its services in the past year as it moved from the program-development stage into implementing the programs.

One U.S.-based company has used the group's programs to test various methods of recovering oil from Oklahoma fields.

Aziz said working closely with the oil industry, rather than simply doing ivory-tower research, has great benefits.

With data from industry, the programs are continually refined to be more precise.

Aziz said the group is altering its articles of association to permit oil company representatives to join the government representatives on the board of directors.

BCGEU seeks pay adjustment

Negotiators for 37,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees Union have returned to the bargaining table seeking a pay adjustment on the previous contract as well as a salary increase on a new agreement.

Negotiations on a cost-of-living adjustment stem from a ruling late last month by a three-member Public Service Adjudication Board.

The board, chaired by Dr. Fred Carrothers, agreed with the union that a clause in the old contract which allows for a salary adjustment can be arbitrated.

The contract, which expired July 31, said salary review talks must take place once the rate of inflation for the six-month period from Oct. 1, 1978 to March 31 rises above four per cent.

Statistics Canada reported that living costs rose 5.1 per cent during that period, so the union sought a COLA adjustment for that amount.

However, when the union put its position to the Government Employee Relations Bureau (GERB), the province's bargaining agency, in May and again in June, it was rejected.

GERB spokesman Mike Davison said in May the government didn't feel the rate of inflation warranted a wage increase for the remaining four months of the contract nor did the government feel the employees' wages had been seriously eroded by inflation.

However, the adjudication board ruled against the government and GERB has agreed to negotiate an adjustment retroactive to April 1, parallel to the negotiations for a new contract.

Two days of negotiations are scheduled during this the ninth set of talks in the current round.

The BCGEU was to present a set of counter-proposals today to those placed on the table by the employer on July 30.

Included in the government's package on that date was a proposal for a two-year agreement with a five-per-cent wage increase in each year.

The union has said it would agree to a two-year pact providing there is a COLA clause in the second year.

Ferry talks resume

Negotiations for a new contract for highways ministry ferry workers are continuing this week following a brief wildcat walkout Friday by casual employees.

John Mochrie, of the B.C. Government Employee Relations Bureau, said the previous contract expired Tuesday.

Mochrie declined to disclose the government's offer or the union's position in the midst of negotiations.

Ferry workers have not taken a strike vote and are not yet in a legal strike position, he said.

To protest their classification as casual workers, picket lines went up before the morning's first runs Friday and lasted until about 2 p.m. while the highways ministry was seeking an injunction from the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

The strike, occurring just hours before the onslaught of heavy holiday weekend traffic, affected ferries between Comox and Powell River, between Nanaimo and Gabriola Island, several Gulf of Georgia runs between Vancouver Island and the Mainland and lake ferries in the Kootenays in southeastern B.C.

Butterflies' favorite bush

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

For the past four weeks there has been daily enjoyment of the results from spring pruning of a quite ordinary buddleia shrub. This is commonly called the Butterfly-bush for it obviously is a favorite with butterflies, moths and also bees.

Last summer this Buddleia davidi, White Bouquet, flowered well enough at a height of about five feet.

As usual I cut off each central cone of blossoms as it turned brown, thus prolonging the display for another month. All side shoots put out smaller cones of blossoms, as well as smaller heads emerging from the same stem from which the first long cone had been removed.

By about the first of September, around Labor Day, flowering seemed to be finished, so a clean-up job was done to remove all faded flowers to prevent the possibility of seed formation to weaken the plant. Small butterflies and bees had been busy for over two months and now had to find other attractions.

Since summer flowering Buddleia davidi sometimes gets a bit winter damaged by frost, no further pruning is done in fall. If a hard frost and searing wind should take some of the top green growth, no harm is done to the shrub. New shoots will surely come from the lower stems even on old plants.

As with other July and August flowering shrubs, pruning is done at some time during April. The exact time is chosen by the kind of general weather pattern of the year. If a cold spell has been experienced earlier and days are becoming milder near the first of April, buddleias may then be pruned. Delay pruning if frost is present. The third week of April is not too late.

This past spring, the white buddleia was pruned hard, taking off the old branches to where small green growths could be seen at various places two to three feet above ground level. Some older wood was cut out entirely to let in plenty of light and air.

Here I should say that this shrub is not more than four years old from a cutting of a much older plant and rooted outdoors.

This year during May and June, new branches appeared from every tiny green shoot. They in turn bore side branches. As flowering continued throughout July, the tallest branches have gone up to a magnificent eight and nine feet, with a total spread of just about 10 feet.

Perhaps also because of more frequent cultivation and deeper watering being done in the nearby area this year, the cones of bloom have never been so handsome. Many terminal flower heads measured 12 inches, with the laterals up to eight inches.

As all the browned heads are being cut off, I can see more laterals appearing everywhere. Even tiny ones are now coming in the leaf axils, promising to continue the display of White Bouquet, a well chosen name indeed.

These details are given with the hope that other home gardeners will remember the results that are possible from their own shrubs of Buddleia davidi.

All varieties are pruned similarly — the splendid purple-red seen in some local parks and gardens, and the more commonly seen lilac color, as well as the more rarely seen pinkish shade which may not be as hardy as these others. Actual measurements will vary with the variety but all are improved by the same kind of pruning at the same times as indicated.

This is a truly fine shrub to have in the garden. The spring and summer growth is no less of interest than the weeks of scented blooming.

A pair of super supper pies

Kay Spicer

A super supper pie makes a splendid Friday night meal for week-end guests. The two featured today can be baked hours in advance, even the day before. Then they can be reheated or served at room temperature.

With careful advance planning it's possible to turn out great meals for a busy week-end without spending hours in the kitchen. Well in advance, plan the strategy for time-saving cooking. It'll make week-ends in the country or on the boat more fun.

Complement the salmon or beef supper pie with Green Beans Vinaigrette and serve cool Melon Melange for dessert.

Salmon Broccoli Pie

- 2 cans (7¾-oz.) salmon
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ¼ cup flour
- ¼ tsp thyme
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 cups liquid (salmon juice plus milk)
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- ½ cup sliced mushrooms
- 1 tbsp chopped parsley
- 1½ cups lightly steamed, chopped broccoli
- Cheese pastry (recipe follows)

Drain salmon well, reserving juice to add to milk to make liquid. Melt butter; blend in flour and seasonings. Cook until bubbly. Add liquid gradually and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Add cheese and stir until melted. Add mushrooms, parsley and salmon, breaking salmon into chunks and including well-mashed bones. Line a 9'' pie pan with half of the cheese pastry. Spread broccoli in pastry-lined pan. Pour salmon mixture over. Roll out remaining pastry and place over salmon mixture. Double edge of pastry over and flute to close pie. Make a good-sized cut in top to allow steam to escape.

Bake in 425°F oven 20 to 25 minutes until pastry is browned and filling is bubbly.

CHEESE PASTRY

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp salt
- ⅔ cup lard
- ½ cup grated cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup ice water

Sift flour and salt together. Add lard; cut in until coarse crumbs form. Stir in grated cheese. Sprinkle with water, a tbsp at a time, mixing lightly until flour is completely moistened. Gather in a ball and press together firmly. Divide in two and shape each half in a round. Roll out ⅛'' thick and use as directed in recipe above.

SAVORY MEAT PIE

- 3 hard cooked eggs
- 2 tbsp butter
- 2 large onions, chopped
- 1½ lbs. lean ground beef
- 2 tsp salt
- 1 tsp dried savory
- ¼ tsp freshly ground pepper
- ¾ cup Swiss cheese, coarsely grated
- 1 egg, beaten
- Pastry for 2 crust 9'' pie

Melt butter in frying pan. Saute onions in butter until lightly browned; remove to a large bowl. Add meat to pan; cook it; break up with a fork until it is cooked but not dry. Chop eggs; add to onion mixture. Remove meat from pan with slotted spoon; add to mixture in bowl. Add salt, savory and pepper. Stir in cheese. Line deep 9'' pie plate with half pastry; spoon in filling. Roll out rest of dough; cover pie; trim; form edge and flute or press with back of fork. Brush top with beaten egg.

Bake in 375°F oven 40 minutes or until golden brown.

Green Beans Vinaigrette

- 2 lbs. green beans
- ½ tsp dried thyme
- ½ tsp salt
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- 3 tbsp vinegar

MELON MELANGE

Season wok to avoid rust stain

Q. I have used the same wok for about eight years. Recently I have noticed that when I dry it, a black rusty residue appears on the paper towel. This stain disturbs me and I assume that it goes into the food during cooking. Should I re-season it or replace it? The wok is obviously not stainless steel.

A. The best woks are made of heavy gauge steel and they do rust when exposed to water. I would certainly recommend re-seasoning your wok. First off you should scrub it well, using a scouring cleanser and a wire brush or a heavy scouring pad with lots of elbow grease. Make certain that all the rusty surface is clean. Wash and dry it, preferably over a low flame. Add oil almost to fill the wok and heat it almost to the smoking point. Let it stand overnight. Pour off the fat and wipe it dry without washing. Ideally, until the wok is well seasoned (with a built-in coating that comes with use) you should not wash it. Instead, add coarse salt such as kosher salt and scrub it clean with paper towels.

Q. When a recipe calls for grated lemon rind, I am at a loss. I have tried a regular small cheese grater, but it is unsatisfactory. What would you suggest that I use?

A. If your "regular" cheese grater does not work, perhaps you should consider discarding it and purchasing a more substantial version. When I grate lemon rind, I simply grate it on the small grating surface of a cheese grater that I picked up in my local hardware store. It is true that some grating surfaces are "rougher" and more efficient than others.

Q. Recently, while feeding my son a Graham cracker, it occurred to me that I have never known the origin of that name. Do you know? Can you buy something called Graham flour?

A. Graham flour (and Graham crackers) are named for an American nutritionist named Sylvester Graham, who lived from 1794 to 1851. He was a reformer in the field of nutrition and about 10 years before his death perfected a fine ground whole wheat flour that today bears his name. As a point of interest, in Finland, certain rusks are known as grahamkorputs and in England, Graham flour is known as Grant flour.

Several calls failed to produce a source for Graham flour, but a spokesman for a local health food store, the Second Nature in East Hampton, N.Y., states that Graham flour and whole wheat pastry flour are the same and that he does sell the latter. Both Graham and the pastry flour are made from soft wheat.

Q. I am a great lover of frogs' legs, but where I live no one seems to know how to prepare them. One cook I know can obtain frozen frogs' legs from India, but he simply deep-fries them without batter. They are dry and tasteless. Do you have a recipe?

A. Here is a recipe for frogs' legs with a tomato and garlic sauce. You could follow the same recipe, but omit the tomato sauce. Otherwise, cook the frogs' legs as directed and serve with lemon wedges.

Frogs' Legs Provencale
(12 large pairs or 24 small pairs frogs' legs)

- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup all-purpose flour, approximately
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 2 cups peeled tomatoes, fresh or canned
- ½ cup vegetable or salad oil
- 1 cup butter
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
- ¼ cup finely chopped parsley.

1.Prepare one pair of frogs' legs at a time. Slip one leg in between the two muscles of the lower part of the other leg to keep the frogs' legs flat.

2.Soak the legs briefly, about five minutes, in the milk.

3.Drain the legs but do not dry, then dredge each pair in flour seasoned with salt and pepper.

4.Meanwhile, pour the tomatoes into a saucepan and simmer until thickened, about 20 to 30 minutes. Season to taste.

5.In a large skillet, heat the oil and four tablespoons of the butter. Cook the legs until golden on one side, then turn and cook the other side until golden.

6.Butter a heatproof serving dish lightly and arrange the frogs' legs on it in a symmetrical fashion. Spoon the tomato sauce neatly over the centers of the frogs' legs.

7.Discard the fat from the skillet and wipe out the skillet with paper toweling. Melt the remaining butter in the skillet and add the garlic. When the butter is hot and foaming, pour it over the frogs' legs. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

By FRED FERRETTI

Contrary to what most concerned consumers tend to believe, everything that artificially keeps processed foods looking or tasting good does not cause cancer. Nor does every chemical concoction that substitutes for natural food additives.

These are among the messages contained in a new 12-page booklet, entitled Does Everything Cause Cancer? A Food Safety Primer, published in Washington by the Center for Science in the Public Interest and written by Greta Bunin and Dr. Michael Jacobson.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest is a non-profit citizens' group founded in 1971 by Jacobson, who has a Ph.D. in microbiology from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and two other scientists. It has 15,000 members who pay $15 each a year and supports itself through those fees and through sales of its publications, devoted mostly to science and food.

Jacobson said the centre was "one of the groups that petitioned the Federal Trade Commission to ban junk food advertisements during hours set aside for children's television," a petition, he points out, "that hasn't lost yet."

Recently, charging that the food industry is "more interested in healthy profits than healthy consumers," Jacobson and Ralph Nader presided over the opening of a "Junk Food Hall of Shame" in downtown Washington.

The museum-style exhibition indicated some of the ailments that can be caused by poor diet — from cancer to constipation — and listed products that the sponsors of the exhibition considered deficient in food value. Among those cited for low nutritional value, high sugar content or high cost were Pop Rocks, Coca-Cola, Fruit Loops, Jell-O, Dream Whip, Shake 'n Bake, Lucky Charms, Trix, Frosted Flakes, Stovetop Stuffing, Cool Whip, Koolaid, Tang and Hawaiian Punch.

In 1972 Jacobson filed a petition with the Food and Drug Administration and with the Treasury Department to have the ingredients on alcoholic beverages noted on labels.

Summer squash: Eat 'em raw

The early picked fruits of summer squashes do not even need cooking to make them palatable. Their flavor and texture is so acceptable in the small sizes that they have absolutely no waste.

Picked at a size when the folded blossom is still attached to the end of the fruit, the stem is edible if you want to eat it along with the rest.

Summer squash are listed as Pattypan (also as Bush Scallop), Summer Crookneck and the green Zuccihini. They appear occasionally in vegetable displays. To get these gourmet vegetables at their best grow them in a tub of soil on a balcony or a doorstep if necessary.

The fruits are so prolific in summer, requests come in for ideas on using them so that there is no waste and no monotony.

Young summer squashes are not peeled nor are the seeds removed. There is no preparation other than wiping off possible garden dust with a damp cloth.

Recipes are really not needed for using zucchini squash in the raw state, for the imagination will go further.

Use zucchini slices in place of cucumber in sandwiches and in salads, with thinly slivered Cheddar cheese and a touch of paprika. For an attractive salad, arrange on individual lettuce halves and serve with thick homemade low-fat yogurt topped with a sprinkle of ground sunflower seeds.

At the picnic table at home or on trips, a nutritious dip will be enjoyed with homemade wheat crackers, celery sticks or even with slender halves of zucchini squash, slightly scooped out to hold the creamy mixture.

CREAMY HALVES

- 1/4 cup soft margarine
- 1/4 cup homemade low-fat yogurt
- 1 Tbsp. grated carrot
- 1/4 tsp. finely chopped dill leaf
- 1/4 cup finely diced zucchini
- few grains salt

Grate carrot into creamy mixture, add zucchini as it is prepared.

Covering cut surfaces of all types of vegetables at once with either yogurt, lemon juice, or oil prevents loss of valuable vitamins. Use very little salt, since natural salts remain in uncooked vegetables.

The Creamy Dip will carry to a picnic in a rigid plastic tub with lid, or in a small glass jar with lid.

The recipe can be varied by substituting finely chopped red radishes for the carrot; or chopped parsley; or a little later when the new crop comes in, a rub of fresh garlic clove around the mixing bowl for a light blending flavor throughout the dip.

Use the same Creamy Dip without the soft margarine as a sauce with the addition of a little grated Cheddar cheese to put between thick fritters made with more zucchini squash.

ZUCCHINI FRITTERS

- 2 cups finely diced zucchini squash
- 1 tsp. finely chopped parsley
- 1/2 tsp. finely cut dill leaves
- 1/8 tsp. thyme
- 2 small eggs
- 2 Tbsp. wheat germ
- 1 Tbsp. torula yeast
- few grains salt
- 2 Tbsp. soft margarine OR soy oil

The young zucchini is chopped or diced by any quick method you know other than grinding which loses too many nutrients and spoils the texture of the pancakes. But the pieces must be very small.

Mix in all other ingredients except the soft margarine. Add a little more flour if needed to make a dough soft enough to drop by spoonfuls.

Heat margarine in frypan gently. When bubbling, drop in four thick fritters. Brown on both sides with gentle heat so that the zucchini is partially cooked.

Whichever way you serve, there will be a tasty meal with a different flavor and texture as well as being satisfying, time-saving and money-saving.

The green-white skins of Pattypan squashes are attractive even before cooking, with their fluted edges. While perfectly tender at three-inch diameter size, they will serve to hold the squash together when filled with stuffing of some kind. Another scalloped squash is called St. Pat. This has a green skin; I have not seen this one.

STUFFED PATTYPAN

- 4 Pattypan Squashes, 3-inch diameter
- 1/2 cup wholewheat breadcrumbs
- 1/2 tsp. grated sweet onion
- few grains dry mustard
- 2 Tbsp. thick homemade yogurt
- 2 Tbsp. grated Cheddar cheese.

Wipe skins of squashes. With sharp pointed knife, remove thin slice from each top; scoop out a small hole without breaking the skin. It should be only just a depression to hold a piled tablespoon stuffing.

These can be eaten uncooked by salad addicts, using knife and fork. Decorate each plate with tomato slices and parsley sprigs.

Good either way, each different.

Next week, because of the speed at which summer squashes develop to usable sizes, there will be more suggestions on their use — in soups, as pan-cooked quick supper dishes with other vegetables and as oven grill dishes.

Chocolate chip pancakes

- 1 cup pancake mix
- 1 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
- 6 scoops peppermint ice cream
- Toasted shredded coconut

Combine mix, milk, egg and oil; mix until batter is fairly smooth. For each pancake, pour scant 1 tablespoon batter onto hot (375 degrees F.), lightly greased griddle. Sprinkle each pancake with chocolate pieces. Turn when tops are covered with bubbles and edges look cooked. Turn only once.

For each serving, place 5 to 6 pancakes on plate; top with a scoop of ice cream and toasted coconut.

Makes six servings.

Some specialties aren't on menu

There are a lot of luxury or grand luxe restaurants around the world that offer specialties that never appear on the menu. These dishes are available to special patrons for very subtle psychological reasons best known to the restaurant's proprietor and maitre d'hotel. The practice offers the owner or maitre d'hotel the opportunity to whisper into a favored customer's ear, "I have something created especially for you and I think you'll like it." Very comforting to the customer's ego and an enticement for continued patronage.

When I was chef at Le Pavillon it enjoyed a considerable esteem in America, and the owner, Henri Soule, had one particular specialty that he would ask to have prepared for his pet customers. The dish was a great favorite of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and Cole Porter. It is a delicate and interesting creation, especially good for summer dining. It consists of small omelets, flavored with herbs and bits of tomato, served cold with a crab meat filling.

This is not the usual oval-shaped omelet rolled over a filling and served hot. It is a "flat" omelet that is cooked like a pancake and turned over once in the skillet, then served cold. The omelets, quite small in size, are cooked in advance and removed from the skillet to cool. They are then filled with a stuffing that consists of crab meat (it was always snow-white lump crab meat at Le Pavillon), bound with a light, tomato-flavored sauce containing parsley, finely chopped shallots and a trace of cognac.

The omelets, generally two to a guest, are sufficient for a meal, but a cold tossed salad would not be out of place. The omelets are easily made within an hour, probably with time to spare. The filling can be made in advance; the omelets are made shortly before guests arrive. They should be filled at the last moment and served with more of the tomato mayonnaise on the side.

Cold Omelets With Crab Meat

8 large eggs
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh tarragon or 1 teaspoon dried
¼ cup heavy cream
¾ cup peeled, red, ripe tomato, cut into half-inch cubes
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 teaspoons butter
Crab with tomato mayonnaise dressing (see below)
Parsley sprigs for garnish.

1. Break the eggs into a mixing bowl. Beat lightly. Add the parsley, tarragon, cream, tomato, salt and pepper to taste. Beat well.

2. Use a small omelet pan or, preferably, a seven-inch Teflon pan. Heat about one-half teaspoon butter in the pan. Add about one-third cup of the egg mixture. Let cook until firm and lightly browned on the bottom, stirring quickly with a fork until the omelet starts to set. When set, slip a large pancake turner under the omelet and turn it quickly to the other side. Let cook about five seconds. Remember you want to produce a flat omelet, not a typical folded omelet. Turn the omelets out flat onto a sheet of wax paper. Continue making the omelets until all the egg mixture is used.

3. When ready to serve, add equal portions of the crab dressing to the center of each omelet. Fold over. Garnish with parsley sprigs. Serve with the leftover tomato mayonnaise to be added at will.

Yield: 4 to 8 servings.

Crab With Tomato Mayonnaise Dressing

1 whole egg
1 teaspoon imported mustard
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 tablespoons bottled chili sauce
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
1 teaspoon cognac
1 pound crab meat, preferably lump crab
Juice of half a lemon.

1. Break the egg into a mixing bowl and add the mustard, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Beat with a whisk.

2. Gradually add the oil, beating constantly until thickened. Add the chili sauce, parsley, shallots and cognac and blend. Set mayonnaise aside.

3. Add the crab meat to a mixing bowl. Add half the mayonnaise and the lemon juice. There should be just enough to bind.

4. Serve the salad with the remaining mayonnaise on the side. Or make a mound of the salad, spoon the additional mayonnaise over it and sprinkle with more chopped parsley.

NUTRITION MATTERS
Dr. Elizabeth Bright-See and Jane Hope

Ice crean and summer go hand in hand.

On the "dog days" of summer everyone from infants in strollers to executives in grey flannel suits are madly licking all hopes and flavors of ice cream cones in a vain attempt to keep cool. Some sport guilty looks while slurping double-scooped blueberry and bubblegum combinations.

But there's really no need to feel guilty. Ice cream contains the same important nutrients as whole milk — protein, calcium, riboflavin, phosphorus, vitamin A and some thiamin. However, there's huge catch. They're present in different amounts. The calories, fat and sugar content of ice cream, in general, is much higher than that of milk while calcium content is lower.

For instance, you'll have to eat two cups of ice cream to get the same amount of calcium as you get from one cup of milk. As well, regular ice cream has almost double the calories compared with milk and some other ices because it is higher in sugar and fat. Most flavors of ice cream contain at least 10 per cent butter fat — double that of milk. Ice milk is a good value. It's low in butter fat — only three to five per cent and offers less calories at less cost than ice cream. Frozen yogurt has two to four per cent fat (it's made from whole or partly skimmed milk so it has the same food value as milk but, again, more calories because of the sugar). Soft ice cream has the same fat content as frozen yogurt (two to four per cent). It also has less sugar than hard ice cream. There's no fat and few calories in a popsicle (but little else except sugar as it's 80 per cent water).

So how do you know what's in these popular products?

In Canada ice cream manufacturers are required to have the ingredients listed on the container unless the product is packaged at the point of purchase. This means if you bought ice cream in the supermarket, you'd know what's in it. (Read the labels, look at the content and compare.) But if you purchased ice cream at an ice cream parlor, you probably couldn't do this. Generally, the more expensive the product, the higher the fat content and the higher the calories. However, all ice cream is a blend of dairy products — milk, cream and other milk solids as well as sugar, various flavorings, additions such as chocolate, nuts and fruit. Eggs are found in frozen custards and French vanilla. During freezing, air is incorporated to increase volume and make the ice cream light and creamy. Most commercial varieties contain stabilizers and emulsifiers.

Stabilizers are used to prevent ice crystals forming which makes ice cream taste gritty. Emulsifiers hold it together and stop ice cream from dripping too much.

To help you decide if you can afford to be part of those summertime lineups at ice cream parlours, here's a list of the approximate calories of some of your favorite treats:

Milkshakes	350
Chocolate Malt (large)	840
Banana Split	540
Chocolate Sundae (large)	400
Frozen Yogurt (1 cup)	175
Ice cream: (1 cup)
Regular (10 pc fat)	255
Rich (16 pc fat)	330
Soft Serve	265
Ice Milk (1 cup)	200
Sherbet (1 cup)	260
Popsicle (1)	70
Chocolate dipped cone	450

There are all kinds of toppings to add to ice cream. But watch these extras; the calories add up.

Whipped topping (1 tbsp.)	10
Banana (1)	100
Marshmallows (1 oz.)	90
Chocolate Fudge Syrup (1 oz.)	125
Plain ice cream cone (1)	19
Sugar cone (1)	49
Chopped peanuts (¼ cup)	210
Shredded coconut (¼ cup)	120

Ice cream products, in general, are regarded as "dentally poor" because of their high sugar content but do have a high nutritional value if you watch the fat content and the calories. If you have a wild craving for ice cream, eat it for dessert.

Danger lurks in grass roots

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Both my son and daughter, aged 20 and 18, have recently become involved with herbs and plants from health food shops. Each day some new concoction arrives at the house. They insist that these are all better than the food additives that presently are invading grocery shelves. I agree that some of the additives have me worried, too. But I want to know if there are any dangers in the plants and herbs that they bring into the house. — Mrs. F.E.

DEAR MRS. E.:

The understandable popularity of health foods today can undoubtedly be traced to the limitless types of food additives that permeate the packaged foods we buy. Many of the additives have complex chemical names which have no meaning for common consumers. The purpose, of course, is to prolong the shelf life of the item or to enhance the color and make it more attractive to the senses.

Fortunately, government agencies are constantly on the prowl, studying these additives and researching the possibilities that they may be harmful with extended use. When an announcement comes out to this effect, warning the public of possible danger and setting up prohibiting laws, more and more people end up being drawn to the more natural foods of plants and herbs.

Young people, particularly, are turning to the safer-sounding "grass roots" products that are uncontaminated by chemicals, additives and pesticides.

Yet, these, too, are not totally free of possible danger. For example, tea made from juniper berries can irritate the stomach and intestines. Some herbal teas containing buckthorn bark and senna leaves, duck roots and aloe can produce severe irritation to the gastrointestinal tract. Camomile tea, now so readily available in health food stores under a variety of brand names, may produce severe allergic reactions. Patients who are known to be allergic to ragweed and related members of the botanical family, may develop unusual allergic symptoms after drinking camomile tea.

Licorice root has become attractive to health food enthusiasts. In large amounts, adverse effects have been reported. Water retention and loss of potassium are but two of these side effects.

Ginseng has captured the imagination of many people. It has been found that ginseng contains small amounts of estrogen, the female sex hormone. Swollen and painful breasts have been reported in some cases.

The seeds, pits and leaves of apricots, butter almond and cassava beans contain substances which can be hazardous, especially to children.

In small amounts, many of these and other substances may not be dangerous, yet health stores should emphasize that.

On a new lamp, you'll read the proper or maximum bulb wattage to use. What about an old lamp? If bulbs don't seem to last long, try a smaller wattage. A 100-watt bulb in a lamp that can take only 75 watts shortens the bulb's life. Also, replace darkened bulbs, which reduce light output 25 to 50 per cent but still use the same amount of current as a new bulb.

You never want to make a framed picture air-tight, says a museum curator, because air needs to circulate in order to evaporate any moisture that gets inside. That's also why you should never place a painting directly against the frame's glass — the glass can hold moisture onto the picture.

The weeds you see on a country drive aren't interesting until you thnk of them as freebies for a dried autumn arrangement. Practise spotting ornamental weeds and grasses as they mature and form seed heads. Pick what you like, remove leaves and preserve with a clear plastic spray. Hair spray makes a temporary (but more expensive) preservative.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am an old fogey (50), but with the changing times I think we should change some of our customs.

When I was young, lovers had a courtship, then were married, after which they went on a honeymoon. Then they returned to set up housekeeping.

Now the order is backwards. They go off on a honeymoon first. If they still like each other, they decide to live together. If that works, they get married, and friends and relatives are expected to provide them with wedding gifts. In my day, wedding gifts were for the purpose of getting the newly-joined couple started in their new home. Couples who have lived together for two or three years are not entering into a new union. They don't need a toaster, dishes, pots, pans and coffee-makers.

So, I suggest skipping wedding presents for those who have already lived together.

Please give me your opinion.

ASKING

DEAR ASKING: It won't work. Most friends and relatives are so glad when the kids decide to make it legal that they send gifts anyway.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I and our four-year-old son live above a retired couple who sit home 24 hours a day. We are not the kind of people who have wild parties. In fact, the last party I had was two years ago, and they were all older relatives.

Well, the man below started to complain about our "noisiness" a week after we moved in. He would bang on his ceiling with a broom handle when I'd shut my cupboard door, walk in my kitchen with shoes on, or slam the refrigerator door.

To top it off, my husband and I were walking out to our car and this man came at my husband with a pocketknife saying we had kept him up until 2 a.m. (We never stay up past midnight.)

I think this man must be off balance. Our landlord agrees with us. Any suggestions?

M.C.

DEAR M.C.: Your neighbor has already broken the law by threatening your husband with a dangerous weapon. If you and your landlord have reason to believe that the man is "off balance," don't wait for a more convincing incident to occur.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing a Dear Abby letter, but here I go: I am 64 and have been widowed for two years. A widower in town has been showering me with expensive presents ever since he lost his wife a year ago.

His sister is a good friend of mine and I have asked her to please tell her brother to quit sending me presents, but either she hasn't done it or her brother doesn't pay her any mind. The presents continue to come.

I am not considering remarriage — at least not to him.

What should I do?

NOT INTERESTED

DEAR NOT: Communicate directly with the generous gentleman.

Marsha 'roughed it' and shed 25 pounds

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. — The woman was blond, in her 50s, and large, very large, 274½ pounds to be exact. Her name, she said, was "Marsha of Miami," and she would go no further than that, other than to say she was a practical nurse.

"Just say that God sent me here," she said in a throaty, theatrical voice that reflected her avocation as a "singer-dancer-entertainer." "It's a miracle of God that I came here."

Marsha of Miami was speaking of the Weight Watchers Adult Camp on the campus of Marymount College here, where she had been in residence for five weeks and had shed 25½ of her original 300 pounds.

The camp is among the first six residence camps for overweight men and women to be opened by Weight Watchers International in the United States. In the last eight years, the vast weight-loss organization has run similar camps for obese children, but this summer marks its first venture into residence camps for adults.

"I had tried everything before this," Marsha said, "drinking water for seven months, liquid protein, taking pills, and I didn't lose weight. Here I'm eating three meals a day, plus milk and fruit snacks, and I'm finally losing."

Not all of the 27 campers (22 women and five men, ranging in age from 19 to 65) were as ecstatic as Marsha. One reported gaining two pounds the first week, and others, who did lose, complained that the camp had no air-conditioning in the dormitory rooms where the campers stay, no maid service, clean sheets only once a week, shared bathrooms, and an indoor rather than an outdoor swimming pool.

But it was precisely this "roughing it" quality that drew many of the campers, including one man who said he always went barefoot into the dining room, where a large orange sign was posted the other day that said "311½ Pounds, I Can and I Will!" The figure referred to the total number of pounds the campers had lost since the Tarrytown camp opened on June 3.

"A spa is too posh for me," said Eva Gelberg, a businesswoman from Washington, D.C., who lost 15 pounds her first five weeks at camp and went out and bought her first pair of shoes with laces in years. "The spas make a fuss about what you wear for dinner. Here you can wear what you want, which is fine with me. I really wanted to rough it; I wanted to be a kid again and try to find myself."

The camp costs $400 the first week with decreasing rates the longer a camper stays. (The average stay is two weeks.) It is run under standard Weight Watchers principles of measured portions of three nutritionally balanced meals a day, exercise, and weekly "encouragement" meetings. A weekly weigh-in is held every Sunday, accompanied by much cheering and applause even if the camper had only a very small weight loss that week.

Erma Bressler, a nutritionist who is camp director, and who is on a diet herself, said that although Weight Watchers didn't like to talk in terms of calories, the campers consumed about 1,200 calories a day. This includes their three meals, plus two snacks a day.

She said that the campers fell mainly into two groups: those who are between 25 and 50 pounds overweight, and those who are over — usually way over — 50 pounds overweight.

"The most important thing," she said, "is that they learn how to eat right here so they can keep the weight off when they go home." As a follow-up, she said, campers are entitled to attend a free Weight Watchers class in their home communities for each week at camp.

A typical day at camp goes something like this: 7 a.m., wake-up; 7:30, stretching exercises, followed by walking and jogging; 8:30, breakfast; 9:30, arts and crafts or nature walk; 10, tennis; 11, swimming; 12:30, lunch; 1:30, team sport; 2:30, swimming and slimnastics; 3:40, tennis clinic; 4:30, group singing or swimming; 6, dinner. At night, there are disco lessons, beauty and charm classes, food and cooking lectures, bridge lessons and movies.

Mrs. Bressler said the campers' programs were tailored to their physical condition, and no one was forced to take part in any of the activities. As a result, some of the heavier campers do nothing more strenuous than walk around the campus. Still, they generally lose weight, Mrs. Bressler said, because of the controlled eating environment.

Joan, a 29-year-old mathematics teacher from Sudbury, Ontario, who weighed in at 248 pounds and hopes to shed 50, said she had signed up for seven weeks at camp "because I have the whole summer off, and if I had stayed home I'd be extremely bored because my husband is working."

"And when I'm bored, I eat," she said over a Weight Watchers lunch of liver casserole, broccoli and salad in the camp dining room. "That's what happens during the year. I start marking papers and I get bored, so I start eating."

Among the other dishes on the camp menu have been such nondiet fare as macaroni and cheese, pancakes, pizza, chili con carne, french toast and tortillas.

Homosexuals ostracized, imprisoned

Struggle for gay rights occurring world over

By FRANCIS B. KENT
Los Angeles Times

In cities across the world they have turned out recently in the hundreds and thousands to demonstrate for what have come to be known as gay rights.

But in some of those cities they have found little acceptance of their cause. The police in Sydney, Australia, broke up their march and put more than 100 of them in jail. In Barcelona, Spain, the police fired on them with rubber bullets.

The incidents suggest that although homosexuals in many countries have made genuine progress, they still have a long way to go. And in no country where the gay movement has taken hold has it made the sort of progress that has been achieved by homosexuals in the United States.

According to Newton Deiter, a consulting psychologist in Los Angeles who has long been active in the movement, they are "about where the Americans were a decade ago."

The Los Angeles Times foreign staff, looking into the subject in Europe, Africa, the Middle East, Latin America and the Orient, found that attitudes range from almost complete acceptance of homosexual behavior to almost complete condemnation.

In some countries, notably France and in Scandinavia and the Orient, homosexual behavior has traditionally been taken for granted. That it has become a problem elsewhere is regarded in France as an Anglo-Saxon aberration.

Yet in much of the rest of the world — in the Soviet Union, parts of Europe, virtually all of Africa and Latin America — homosexual behavior is strictly proscribed by law. Infractions can bring long prison terms.

Even where the law is silent on the subject, or is not strictly enforced, the homosexual often finds himself an object of discrimination. He may be ostracized socially and he may find it difficult to get — and hold — a job.

Jose Lopez of Buenos Aires is a case in point. Lopez (not his real name) is not homosexual but looks like the popular image of a homosexual. He is slender, with delicate features and blond, curly hair.

"I've done everything," he said recently. "I've tried to develop a more muscular physique. But they take one look at me and I don't get the job."

Lopez, who has a doctorate in education, is currently employed as a clerk in a public translator's office.

Laws against homosexual behavior are aimed for the most part at men. Women are rarely mentioned. But lesbians in several countries said they were certain that they would lose their jobs if their sexual preference became public knowledge.

Losing a job would be relatively mild treatment in some countries. Recently in Iran, where revolution has installed a strictly Islamic regime, two men were executed by a firing squad after being convicted of sodomy.

In at least one other country, Greece, the official attitude appears to be growing more severe rather than more lenient. Among ancient Greeks — Sophocles and Alcibiades are among the more prominent figures mentioned as homosexuals — such behavior was widely tolerated, but today the police are quick to move against bars and other places where homosexuals congregate.

Israeli government policy has been not to prosecute or even investigate homosexual relations between adults. Nonetheless, Israeli homosexuals have had no luck with their efforts to have the law against homosexuality rescinded, and they have been trying since 1975, when they founded the Organization for the Defense of Individual Rights.

Working against them is Jewish tradition, which is unequivocal. The Bible argues that homosexual activity is a capital offense, and a Tel Aviv rabbi said recently that the legal restraints are further justified because homosexuality "debases the dignity of man and does not serve the procreative purpose of sex."

In the Soviet Union there is a tendency to view homosexuality as something peculiar to the decadent West. Last year when weightlifter Gennady Ivanchenko returned to Moscow from a U.S. tour, he was quoted in the press as saying:

"Just imagine, they talk about homosexuality without shame, as if it were something completely normal."

Homosexual acts are classified as crimes in the Soviet Union. The law provides for prison terms of five years and more, depending on circumstances.

In 1933, when sodomy was outlawed in the Soviet Union, the commissar of justice suggested that such behavior was counterrevolutionary, engaged in by "the dregs of society and the remnants of the exploiting classes."

Even so, people in Moscow today talk fairly openly about homosexuality, mostly among artists and entertainers.

A Moscow intellectual commented, "The difference between now and the mid-1960s is that then people talked about it in an accusing fashion, and now they talk about it as though it were nothing extraordinary."

There is no sign of change in Africa, either. There homosexuality seems to be totally taboo. The subject is not even discussed. There reportedly are no gay clubs and no gay literature. If there are any gay men, they remain very much in the closet.

A doctor in the University of Nairobi's department of psychiatry said that no one had ever sought help at a mental health clinic there for any problem connected with homosexuality. He said that prison inmates had been known to engage in homosexual activity but invariably abandoned such behavior when released.

An example of how the law views homosexual activity in Africa is found in Section 165 of Kenya's penal code: "Any male person who commits any act of gross indecency with another male person . . . is guilty of a felony and is liable to imprisonment for five years, with or without corporal punishment."

Similar legal restraints crop up throughout Latin America, where society demand that a man be manly — macho. Moreover, more than 90 per cent of the people in Latin American countries are Roman Catholic, and the church's traditonal position is that homosexuality is sinful.

Another factor is the family. As a Buenos Aires sociologist put it: "A homosexual is a family disgrace. The mother of a homosexual son is devastated, if she finds out, and unreconciliable. She considers herself a failure. A homosexual will go to great lengths to keep his family from finding out, especially his mother."

French homosexuals have no need of a movement to champion their case. they have no cause, for they have never had any problem with being "accepted," either legally or socially.

In 1897, when the poet and playwright Oscar Wilde left England's Reading Gaol after serving two years for homosexual offenses, he headed directly for Paris, where he resumed his way of life without hindrance.

Italy has no law aimed specifically at homosexuals, but homosexuals — men and women alike — are sometimes prosecuted under provisions in the penal code against obscene behavior. According to a study published last year, no more than 15 per cent of the population is sympathetic to homosexuals.

Most Italina homosexuals keep it a secret. There is an organization, called FUORI, which seeks to eliminate job discrimination on the basis of sexual preference. FUORI stands for United Revolutionary Front of Homosexuals in Italy, but it is also the Italian word for "outside" suggesting an emergence from confinement. When FUORI puts on a public demonstration, only a handful of people turn up.

West German homosexuals in increasing numbers are saying openly, "Ich bin schwul" — "I am gay" — in an effort to break down the still-formidable barriers to public acceptance.

More than 600 of them recently permitted the newsmagazine Stern to identify them as homosexual, many at considerable risk to job and social status.

Until 10 years ago, German law provided for prison terms of up to 15 years for anyone convicted of homosexual activity. Now there is no prohibition as long as those involved are at least 18 years old and there is no coercion.

Britain's laws on the subject of homosexual behavior are perhaps the world's most specific. Women, except those in the armed forces, are not covered by the law. In England and Wales, men are free to engage in homosexual actvity as long as both are 21 or over, neither is mentally defective and what they do is done in private.

Before the judge

A 25-year-old man wanted for escape in Alberta was given a two-month sentence in Victoria provincial court Tuesday by Judge William Ostler after pleading guilty to shoplifting.

Reginald Ingvar Jensen, who was wanted on a Canada-wide warrant after breakng out from Borden federal penitentiary in Alberta about six months ago, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Crown counsel Donald Laughton told the court Jensen was apprehended shortly before noon Saturday after walking out of Eaton's with a $38 pair of pants which he didn't pay for and placed in the bottom of a bag.

Jensen, whose lengthy criminal record began in 1970, had been serving a 42-month sentence imposed in Calgary on Feb. 2, 1978, for armed robbery when he went missing.

Laughton also said that Jensen had $138.61 in his pockets at the time of the incident.

A 37-year-old woman was charged with attempted murder and causing bodily harm with intent to wound, main or disfigure in connection with a Saturday incident in Victoria.

Sharon Darlene Hansen, 2605 Blanshard, was charged following the stabbing of 62-year-old Pearl Hope Eddy, the accused woman's mother, at the Blanshard Court address.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang's request for an adjournment until Friday so that a psychiatric examination could be made was granted by Ostler.

A Washington state fisherman lost his $2,913.05 salmon catch and was fined $500 after pleading guilty to fishing within Canadian territorial waters Monday morning.

Court was informed John Holmes of Port Ludlow was spotted aboard his vessel, Twoclaws, at 2:22 a.m., six-tenths of a mile inside Canadian waters near Sherringham Point. Canadian fisheries officers boarded the vessel 16 minutes later and seized approximately 2,000 pounds of fish.

Ostler ordered a presentence report for 27-year-old Dennis Leonard Shaffer, 2091 Parklands, who pleaded guilty to public mischief and attempted fraud.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said Shaffer reported to Sooke RCMP on May 22 that his truck had been damaged at the Sooke River Hotel hours earlier by someone who took a sledgehammer to it, breaking the windshield and a headlight. Lang said a woman corroborated his story by saying she had glass from the broken windshield in her eye.

However, an RCMP officer saw the truck earlier the same day and did not notice any damage on it. Police then alerted the Insurance Corporation of B.C. regarding a possible fraudulent claim.

On May 25, Shaffer made a claim at ICBC, Lang continued. Shaffer and his companion were questioned by police June 14 and finally admitted the damage was done by himself and a friend at a Kaltasin Road residence.

He was remanded until Aug. 22 for sentencing.

Also remanded until Aug. 22 for a presentence report was 17-year-old Glen Robert John Doussept, 835 Hillside.

Lang said Victoria police responded to a silent alarm Monday night at 9:25 and found Doussept inside. He had gained entry through loose boards which covered a window.

Ostler released Doussept on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 but imposed a 10 p.m. curfew until Aug. 22, when he will be sentenced.

A 19-year-old on probation for breaking and entering was given a 10-day jail sentence for stealing four tire rims July 25.

Court was informed Borden took the rims off a Triumph sports car at his apartment parking lot and placed it on his own vehicle. Victoria city police questioned him about the theft the following night and he initially denied any knowledge of the theft but finally admitted it.

Borden was convicted of breaking and entering May 7, 1979, and was given a suspended sentence, two years probation and 75 hours of community service work.

Judge Fred Green committed 32-year-old Kenneth Malcolm McLeod, 1686 Lansdowne, for higher court tiral on two charges.

McLeod was charged Jan. 19 with possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking and importing cocaine.

A 32-year-old man who created a furor at a Victoria taxi office Saturday night was fined $40 after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting.

The incident occurred about 10:15 p.m. when a woman at the dispatch office of Empress Cabs, 585 Pandora, was seen screaming and crying. She told police that John Edward Aitken, 933 Admirals, was in the office shouting that he was going to close the taxi firm down because of a pay dispute. At one point, she informed police, Aitken took the microphone and called all cabs to return to the office because of trouble there and one of the vehicles responded.

Bartleman pleaded guilty to the charge which arose July 20 when he was stopped while leaving the Sidney Hotel parking lot. Subsequent breath test readings of .19 were obtained by Sidney RCMP.

Bartleman was convicted of the same offence Nov. 6, 1975, when he was fined $350, Laughton said.

Blockade brings radar trap

A five-hour blockade of West Saanich Road by members of the Patricia Bay Indian Band ended yesterday when an RCMP officer set up a radar trap.

The move ended what Staff-Sgt. George Whittaker said could have become "an ugly scene" as motorists became more resentful at having to detour around the blockade.

The Indian blockade was the band's latest move to force authorities to better control traffic along the section of road that crosses the band's land along the north edge of Patricia Bay.

With yesterday's peaceful blockade, the band also wrested agreement from the highways department to post additonal cautionary and speed signs along the road, and to instal speed strips, raised lines such as those along the Pat Bay Highway north of the Elk Lake traffic lights.

CUPE talks called

Mediator Clark Gilmour has called a meeting for Thursday between negotiators for the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association and the Saanich local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Local 374, which represents municipal employees in Saanich, Oak Bay, North Saanich and Sidney, is the only area group of CUPE workers to reject a two-year contract.

Four other locals within the same Joint Negotiating Committee have already voted to accept.

The 500-member Saanich local disagrees with one clause in the tentative agreement which states that the union will back off on a demand for arbitration of a cost of living adjustment.

The COLA was pegged to the cost rise in 1978 and was to come into effect Jan. 1, 1979, but the GVLRA rejected the adjustment on the grounds that it would be turned down by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

The four other locals which have accepted the GVLRA contract represent Victoria outside workers, inside and outside school board employees and Esquimalt municipal workers.

Three other locals representing city inside staff, public library and Capital Region District employees bargained separately and agreed earlier to a two-year contract with wage increases of 7.25 per cent in each year.

The offer to the JNC locals includes a COLA that would be triggered in 1980 if costs rise by 7½ per cent.

Charge laid in stabbing

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 28-year-old Vancouver man was charged with attempted murder today after an 11-year-old boy was brutally stabbed by a man wielding a butcher knife in a city park Tuesday night.

Police said the attack was not provoked. The assailant came from a nearby house, pulled the boy off a swing and stabbed him repeatedly. The boy tried to escape but collapsed on a nearby street.

Police say Anicedo Sanpedro Ata was arrested after John Dekelver, of Enderby, was attacked in Riley Park in south-central Vancouver. The boy was in satisfactory condition in hospital with cuts to his face, arms and body.

Seat sale a success

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada's latest seat sale is proving so popular that company spokesman believes it will be sold out in a week to 10 days.

Michel Langlois, director of sales and reservations for the eastern region, said 35 per cent of available places for the most popular destinations have already been sold since the autumn sale was announced Aug. 1.

Vancouver is the most popular destination for Montrealers, he said, with 3,000 tickets, or 40 per cent of the spaces, sold. Los Angeles is the second most popular spot, with 2,000 tickets reserved, followed by Miami, Edmonton and Calgary.

Sale seats vary from 10 to 80 per cent of the capacity of flights.

When a similar seat sale was announced in the spring, the surprised airline's phone lines were flooded.

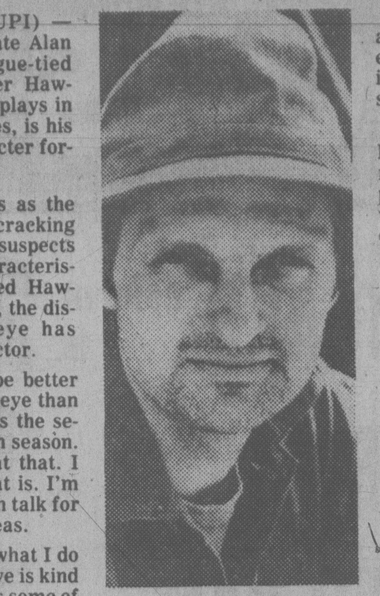
Hawkeye role alter ego? Alda's not sure either

Scott's World
By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The usually articulate Alan Alda becomes tongue-tied when asked whether Hawkeye, the doctor he plays in TV's *M*A*S*H* series, is his alter ego or a character foreign to himself.



ALAN ALDA

After seven years as the world-weary, wise-cracking Army surgeon, one suspects Alda's personal characteristics have permeated Hawkeye or, conversely, the disenchanted Hawkeye has rubbed off on the actor.

"I wish I could be better talking about Hawkeye than I am," Alda said as the series began its eighth season. "I'm not so good at that. I don't know why that is. I'm pretty vocal and can talk for an hour in most areas.

"An awful lot of what I do when I play Hawkeye is kind of intuitive. There is some of Hawkeye in me. But I try to play any role as if I had that character's background and were in his circumstances.

"I know personally I sometimes get cynical when I can't find any gasoline for my car when they've got it sitting in storage tanks all over the country. Then they drop Skylab on us and you can't drive away from it because there's no gas. I get cynical about things like that.

"So given the right circumstances I guess I can get as cynical as Hawkeye. I can even be as much of a smart alec, using a sense of humor to ward off the stubbed toes of life.

"I don't calculate his character. I sort of allow him to emerge on the set by imagining myself in Korea in that specific characterization.

"But it's not hard to lose Hawkeye when I take other roles. I think actors should play a lot of parts. That's what actors are supposed to do.

"I made eight movies before I began *M*A*S*H* but nobody remembers.

"It probably confuses some movie-goers who know me only as Hawkeye. I don't think anybody is really like him. He's kind of a literary work of the imagination. You couldn't spend too much time in the company of someone who is such a smart alec. But in half-hour doses once a week he's easy to take."

Over the long haul Alda is considerably easier to take than Hawkeye. He is an acutely sensitive and intelligent man who dislikes personal publicity. He draws a curtain around his private life.

He is aware, however, of the need to publicize his movies and generally grants interviews when he has a new picture to sell.

His latest film is The Seduction of Joe Tynan, the story of a U.S. senator with ambitions to become president, losing his family in the process.

Alda is particularly anxious for the film to succeed because he wrote the screenplay in addition to playing the title role.

He is one of those rare TV series stars who manages to move effortlessly back and forth from the tube to big screen without abandoning a regular weekly show. Last year Alda starred in California Suite and Same Time Next Year, during his six-month hiatus from *M*A*S*H*. He also completed The Seduction of Joe Tynan in that brief span.

Of his facility for maintaining his identity as "Hawkeye" on TV while starring in hit pictures, Alda said, "I don't think it depends on what the actor does so much as the material he finds himself doing.

"I believe a movie succeeds because the whole picture works, not because of the actors in it. There are famous movie stars who make flops and then go on and make hits. But if a TV star makes a movie flop, it's cause for concern.

"Box-office stars don't exist anymore. An impressive cast doesn't make for a hit. Look at Missouri Breaks with Brando and Jack Nicholson.

"It's also a myth that you can't go from TV to films. A lot of big stars have done it — McQueen, Eastwood, Winkler, Travolta and Garner to name a few.

"I happened to be in good movie material. Both California Suite and Same Time were proven pieces of material."

To further insure a standard of excellence in his work, Alda plans to direct his next movie. He has directed 20 *M*A*S*H* episodes in recent years.

"I'm really doing what I've wanted to do all my life," he said. "I remember the first book I ever read, Top Horse at Crescent Ranch. I was eight years old. I sat down and wrote my own book about a horse who wasn't tops.

"I wrote plays and made little movies in my back yard as a boy. I always wanted to write and to be an actor and to direct as well. So I'm really doing what I did as a kid.

"Mainly because of my success as an actor in *M*A*S*H* I'm lucky to be in a position to have people willing to trust me in these other areas. It's not a matter of spreading myself thin. It's realizing some potential, I think.

"It was thrilling for me to be working in my own screenplay. Right now I'm completing another screenplay which I'll direct. It's more fun this way than just reporting to work as an actor."

Kurt Kasner dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Kurt Kasznar, a Vienna-born character actor who appeared in 60 movies and the 1968-69 television series Land of the Giants, has died of cancer at age 65.

Kasznar was admitted to hospital in Santa Monica about 10 days before his death Monday, publicist Pat Fitzgerald said Tuesday.

Kasznar was fluent in four languages and was adept at playing amiable rogues. He retained a middle-European accent for many of his movie and television roles.

Paul Almond roars back

Seven years after his last film, Journey, starring former wife Genevieve Bujold, opened to mixed reviews and a short theatrical run, Almond is busy preparing a $7.75-million production tentatively entitled The Burning Book.

The movie recounts the historically important but generally unknown story of how William Tyndale defied the Church in the 16th century to mass-produce the first English translation of the Bible.

The cast will be headed by David Warner, the English actor best remembered for Morgan, as Tyndale, Christopher Plummer, Richard Harris and Michael Morarity. The two female leads will be cast soon.

One of the most totally Canadian productions yet, The Burning Book will be shot this fall on locations in England and Montreal.

English locations will represent England and Old Montreal will stand in for 16th-century Antwerp.

French-Canadians, plus whatever real Flemish extras Almond can find, will play the people of Flanders.

"I've read many scripts over the last few years and this one was by far the best. I'd been working on two or three other projects, but this film was clearly my meat."

"What's so exciting about a man who translates the Bible?" Almond asks rhetorically.

"Well, in the 16th century translating the Bible was considerably more than an act of scholarship; it was a direct challenge to the authority of the Church. It was a political as well as a religious act."

The 48-year-old director of Isabel and Act of the Heart says he hesitated before he accepted the assignment because of its seeming lack of movie potential.

"And very quickly it was pointed out to me that costume melodramas, especially those with serious or religious overtones, have always had a very solid audience in Middle America — pictures like The Robe or The Ten Commandments on the one hand, or like A Man for All Seasons and Anne of the Thousand Days on the other.

THE NAME GAME IS PLAYED LIKE BINGO . . .

But instead of numbers, letters are drawn and published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist. The form is made up from the letters in your name, in accordance with the rules of the game which accompany every form. Below is an example showing nine different ways a form could be made up using the name "John Samuel Anderson". Remember, no nicknames or punctuation. Good Luck!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

IMPORTANT!

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Talented players bring rarely-done works to life

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Not all "new" music heard at International Festival concerts is contemporary. Some of it and its composers may be unfamiliar to us even though written a century and more ago.

A sample of this sort of newness provided one of the highlights of recent Festival concerts with the performance of Quintette Op.51 No.1 by the 19th century German-Danish composer, Friedrich Kuhlau.

The Quintette is one of three composed for the same group of instruments — flute, violin, two violas and cello. The Festival ensemble consisted of Robert Aitken, flute, Jean-Jacques Kantorow of Trio Rouvier, violin, Nobuko Imai and Eberhard Klemmstein, violas, and Barry Gold, cello.

The exuberant vitality and poetic qualities of the quintet was fully exploited by the five performers. They achieved a balance and cohesion usually anticipated only from an ensemble of long association.

Voice was introduced in this concert for the first time in the Festival. The quartet, singing Schumann's Spanische Liebes Lieder, was made up of members of the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts voice program. Lise Dion, soprano; Barbara Lake, mezzo-soprano, James McLean, tenor, and Joel Katz, bass, displayed fine voices with pleasing balance and blend in the close weaving of the Schumann work.

The all-chamber ensemble program was further highlighted by the Pacific Wind Quintet in a vivacious and graceful performance of Quintette Op.79 by the late 19th-century German composer, August Klughardt, and by the Philadelphia String Quartet, back with the Festival for its final three weeks, giving a balanced and stylish reading of Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat Op.74.

Novelties do not always stand well in quality, tending to be a little gimmicky. But the International Festival has produced one novelty that is not only a distillation but a melding of art forms. The performance was by that fine musical scholar and pianist, Joseph Bloch; the work, Erik Satie's little known Sports and Divertissements.

This was a collector's item, the concept of its Parisian publisher to produce a luxury album of musical vignettes combined with decorative illustrations and brief witty written observations.

Bloch explained that it was meant to be performed for a small gathering which could look over the pianist's shoulder at the illustrations and read the comments. In the University Centre auditorium, Bloch performed the small cameos and spoke the lines while the Art Deco-like illustrations were projected on a screen.

The opulently melodic, long and difficult Schubert Fantaisie Op.103 in F minor for four hands brought together the towering keyboard mastery of Ruth Laredo and Jacques Rouvier in another unique performance, and on the same keyboard program, Robin McCabe, an astonishing artist who has always something fresh to say, brought rich color and myriad mood changes to a group of Chopin-Godowsky Etudes and Ravel's Alborada del Gracioso.

Bela Siki, a pianist well known to Victoria concert-goers, gave an imaginative interpretation of Schumann's extensive Carnaval.

William Shookhoff conducted the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra in this week's concerto program. Breaking the instrumental format of this series, the concert presented three members of the Shawnigan voice program in works with orchestra as well as oboe and violin concertos.

The full and glowing soprano voice of Marie Danielle Parent, with Jacques Rouvier as pianist, was heard in Mozart's recitative and rondo, "Ch'io mi scordi di te?" The beauty of the vocal line, silkily smooth in production, revealed a fine Mozartean gift.

Mezzo soprano Barbara Lake sang Mahler's Songs to Poems by Ruckert, and soprano Patricia Fournier sang three songs from Les Nuits d'Ete, Op 7 by Berlioz. Both singers possess exceptional voices and interpretively provide considerable satisfaction

The fact that they were not overshadowed by the presence of the great American oboist, Bert Lucarelli, in a brilliant performance of Mozart's Concerto in C Major K.314, nor by violinist Daniel Heifetz's supple rendering of Beethoven's D Major, is probably the finest compliment one could pay these young but proficient singers.

Youth charged in Alps deaths

ANNECY, France (Reuter) — A 17-year-old British youth injured in a mountaineering accident in which eight persons died in the French Alps was charged Tuesday with manslaughter.

He faces from three months to two years in prison if convicted.

Examining Magistrate Francis Auger said the teenager also is charged with accidentally causing injuries through negligence.

The magistrate declined to name the youth because he is a minor but said he is from Northern Ireland. He will appear before Annecy juvenile court in the next few months.

The youth was roped to two British friends when they slipped and fell, dislodging three other groups of climbers below them.

Twelve men and women fell into a deep crevice. Eight were killed, including the other two Britons and three members of a West German family.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers have identified about 5,000 enormous gas clouds in the Milky Way that they say are the most massive objects in the galaxy.

The clouds, in orbit around the centre of the galaxy, are each about 200 light years in diameter and some have the mass of one million suns, says a report to be given today at an International Astronomical Union symposium at Mont Tremblant, Que., about 110 kilometres northeast of Montreal.

The National Science Foundation said that although it has been known for years that a few galactic clouds existed, this is the first evidence that they are so numerous and massive.

The sheer mass of these gas and dust clouds makes them an integral part of the galaxy, the report says. Ninety per cent of the Milky Way's matter is contained in its 100 billion stars, and of the remainder, about half is concentrated in these immense clouds.

The cloud findings were made by Philip Solomon and David Sanders of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and Nicholas Scoville of the University of Massachusetts.

"The most significant finding is that most interstellar matter is in these clouds, held together by gravity, and not just matter floating around dispersed," Solomon said in an interview.

The scientists said the typical cloud is as massive as about 500,000 suns. The only other galactic objects that approach the clouds in mass are some 200 globular clusters. These groupings of hundreds of thousands of stars form a sort of halo around the galaxy.

Solomon said the largest concentration of giant clouds occurs in a broad ring located between 12,000 and 24,000 light years from the centre of the flat, spiral-shaped galaxy.

The Milky Way is about 100,000 light years in diameter and the Earth's sun is 30,000 light years from the galactic centre.

A light year is the distance light can travel in a year at 297,600 kilometres per second — about 10 trillion miles.

Solomon said hydrogen is the most plentiful substance in the clouds, which radiate no detectable light and are invisible to the naked eye from Earth.

But he said astronomers have identified at least 40 different types of molecules in the clouds, including carbon monoxide, ammonia, alcohol and formaldehyde.

Coast guards assembled a sophisticated array of equipment to scour southern Texas beaches soiled by tarry globs of crude from the world's worst oil spill, and to block oil now in the Gulf of Mexico from coming ashore.

Gift shops reported a run on nail polish and other solvents used to remove the tar from the feet of beachcombers. But hotels were filled and Ralph Thompson, executive vice-president of the island's tourist bureau, said: "We don't have a serious problem here."

Stiff winds that pushed the slick toward Texas diminished Tuesday, stalling the advance of the crude from a runaway Mexican well.

Reconnaissance flights over the gulf detected several oil patches south and east of Corpus Christi, said Carl Posey of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

It was not known whether those sheens came from a slick three kilometres wide and 9½ kilometres long that was seen bobbing in warm waters southeast of Corpus Christi.

Earlier in the day, Roger Meacham, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency, said there was a "distinct possibility" the oil in the gulf might damage the sensitive coastal environment from Texas to Florida.

But he cautioned that there is "no way in the world anybody could say that for sure."

"It would be like predicting the weather three months from now. There are too many unknowns."

Oil from the Mexican well is spewing at a rate of about 20,000 barrels a day into the Bay of Campeche, hundreds of kilometres southeast of South Padre Island. Texas Lt.-Gov. Bill Hobby said Tuesday he was told it will take six more weeks to drill relief wells in the Mexican seabed to help bring an end to the gushing.

Coast guard boats towed long "floating fences" across the Brazos Santiago Pass leading to Laguna Madre — a large inlet that provides breeding grounds for a variety of marine life and homes for many species of birds, blue crabs, shrimp and oysters.

The fences run slightly below the surface, and corral surface oil that is then sucked up by specially equipped boats.

But neither the oil nor cleanup operations appeared to worry vacationers who packed the island's resort hotels.

Australian docks open

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Australia's 41 ports were back in business today after an eight-day dock workers' strike that cost the economy an estimated $900 million.

The 10,000 dock workers decided to go back to work pending further talks on an inter-union dispute in western Australia.

During the strike, more than 100 ships were tied up waiting to be loaded or unloaded and manufacturers lost production while waiting for materials.

Exports of minerals such as iron ore and coal were also delayed.

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — A proposal to pipe oil 1,950 kilometres to Minnesota from Port Angeles, Wash. fails to comply with several land use plans and regulations of King County, a county planner has told a Washington state Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council hearing.

The county zoning code would have to be amended to bring the proposed construction into compliance with county law, Ed Sand, county building and land development division manager, told the council.

He said the project envisioned by the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. did not meet the zoning code definition of a utility because the residents of Western Washington would derive no benefits from it.

If the line — capable of carrying up to 933,000 barrels of crude a day — delivered some oil to refineries in Western Washington, it would meet the definition, Sand said.

His remarks buttressed those of County Executive John Spellman, who told the council last week that the citizens of Washington state will tolerate either a pipeline or oil tankers on Puget Sound, but not both.

Extra stall alarms on DC-10s backed

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Additional equipment to warn pilots of stalls, which the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has recommended for the DC-10, would not have prevented a crash that killed 273 persons, a federal official says.

However, Hugh Waterman, chief of systems and equipment for the FAA's western region, testified Tuesday that the FAA proposals should be put into effect to increase public safety.

Officials have said a stall contributed to the crash of American Airlines Flight 191 at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport. The DC-10's left engine and mounting pylon peeled away from the wing when the plane was taking off.

The FAA has proposed that an additional "stick-shaker" be installed to warn a pilot when the plane loses enough speed and lift to approach a stall, and that computers used to sense the position of lift devices on the plane's wings be programmed to get readings from both wings instead of just one.

The "stick-shaker" causes the pilot's control column to vibrate when the plane begins to go into a stall.

The imbalance contributed to the stall, officials have said.

Sioux seeking Custer-buster

FORT LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — Camped in a field across the North Platte River from historic Fort Laramie, 150 Sioux tribal leaders are demanding White House and Justice Department representatives meet with them to discuss their claim to 7.3 million acres in South Dakota's Black Hills.

An aide to South Dakota Sen. George McGovern was the only federal representative for the opening of the session Tuesday, and a tribal leader said they would demand an apology if their other invitations were snubbed.

The Sioux, clad in blue jeans and cowboy hats, said they were dissatisfied with the recent court settlement of an 1868 treaty that was abrogated by Congress after Gen. George Custer discovered gold in the Black Hills in 1877.

"We're here to discuss the 1868 treaty and all of the other treaties," said Isaac Bearshield. "Every damn one of them is broken."

The U.S. Court of Claims recently awarded the Sioux $105 million — $17.5 million plus 5 per cent interest for each year since 1868 — for the Black Hills and $43.9 million for the rest of the land.

But Sioux leaders said the settlement is paltry compared to the value of minerals extracted from the area.

John King Jr. of the Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota said the Sioux want 7.3 million acres of federal reserve land in the Black Hills returned to them, along with half of the mineral royalty payments since 1868.

Shuttle defect probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday it is checking records to determine if possibly defective aluminum plate has been used in construction of the space shuttle.

The Federal Aviation Administration announced two weeks ago that it had asked all U.S. aircraft manufacturers to make similar checks after the agency received a report that a German aircraft manufacturer had found faulty aluminum plate made by Reynolds Metals.

NASA said it has purchased aluminum plate from Reynolds but is not certain whether any of it has gone into the shuttle, which is scheduled for its maiden manned orbital flight next year.

"We won't know until we have tracked down all the records from the vendors and determine if any of the aluminum was earmarked for the shuttle and then see if it was used," said NASA spokesman Dave Garrett.

He said if the possibly faulty aluminum had been used on the shuttle, the most likely section would be the large external fuel tank, which will contain liquid hydrogen under pressure when the spaceship is launched.

Aluminum also is used in several other shuttle parts, including the main body and the booster rocket engines.

Mair hopeful on Skagit

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday he is optimistic that the raising of Ross Dam in Washington State can be avoided.

B.C. government and Seattle City Light officials will meet in Seattle next week to work out a formula that could save 4,800 acres in the Skagit Valley recreational area in B.C. from flooding.

"There is a reason to be optimistic, and I hope settlement can be achieved in a manner that will not involved raising the dam," Mair said.

Phoenix presents Grimm's tales

Students enrolled in the B.C. secondary school theatre workshop sponsored by the University of Victoria are putting on a play called Fables, Fools and Fantasy.

The six week program has attracted about 35 students from across the province, who are studying acting, movement, voice, lighting and set construction.

The play is presented as the final part of the course and is an adaption of several of Grimm's folk tales.

It is directed by Jim Leard and the musical score has been written by composer David Boyce. The team is responsible for last summer's successful workshop production of The Good Woman of Setzuan.

This year's production will be presented at Phoenix Theatre on the UVic campus. Performances start Wednesday and run nightly, except Sunday, until Aug. 16.

There will be a matinee performance Saturday at 2 p.m. Box office will be open every day except Sunday from 12 p.m. until 4 p.m.

Ticket prices are $3, with a discount price of $2 for students and senior citizens. For ticket reservations call the Phoenix Theatre box office, 477-4821.

Saanich buckles before region's suit

Capital Region District chairman Murray Glazier said today there is now no need to press legal action against Saanich since the municipality has approved a new definition of regional shopping centres.

Glazier said the agreement, accepted by Saanich council Tuesday night, indicates a commitment by the municipality to bring the proposed 229,000 square foot Broadmead shopping centre through the regional board.

The agreement is effective until the amended regional plan, which receives second reading today, is in place, Glazier said.

Looholes in the existing regional plan, drawn up in 1974, allowed Saanich to proceed with the Broadmead development without CRD input.

Saanich council approved the definition at its Tuesday meeting providing the CRD drops the legal action initiated earlier this week against Tillicum shopping centre.

Glazier said he is confident the regional board will withdraw an action initiated earlier this week to quash a Saanich bylaw allowing a major shopping centre on the old Tillicum drive-in theatre site.

The new definition, drawn up by CRD and Saanich planners, says a regional shopping centre is a development with gross leaseable space exceeding 175,000 square feet.

A shopping centre has regional impact if it contains one or more full line department stores and provides a full range of smaller specialty stores and a food store.

It is also of regional significance if located near the boundary of a neighboring municipality, the definition states.

Victoria was invited to participate in the discussion but refused, municipal administrator William Tremayne said in a report to council.

Glazier said Victoria will have a chance to participate today during second reading of an amended version of the regional plan.

The regional shopping centre definition agreed to by Saanich will be incorporated into the final bylaw, but the 175,000 square foot limit is open to negotiation and will be discussed today by regional directors.

He estimated it wll take several months before the permanent version of the regional plan is adopted.

The bylaw will be referred today to all core municipalities for comments and should be returned to the CRD no later than the Sept. 26 meeting. It will probably undergo further revision.

Canada won't up aid ante

LUSAKA (CP) — Canada has resisted calls for substantial increases in Commonwealth technical aid, Prime Minister Joe Clark disclosed Tuesday.

As the summit conference rolled to an end, a day ahead of schedule, Clark told reporters there was pressure to expand the $30-million Commonwealth fund for technical co-operation.

He said Canada resisted these calls on the ground that Canadian money already makes up a disproportionate share — about 33 per cent compared to Britain's 36 per cent — with the other 37 members contributing 31 per cent.

Clark also said that the Commonwealth leaders, who had discussed the Namibia situation, felt it was wiser not to deal further with the question of independence for that mineral-rich territory fearing that further debate at this stage might upset the Commonwealth accord on the future of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Canada has been involved with four other Western countries in an attempt to gain independence for Namibia through UN-supervised elections and an end to the current guerrilla war.

A bulky, 10,000-word communique closing the seven-day meeting pledged the 39 member countries to uphold human rights, promote women's rights, fight racial discrimination and work toward more aid for industrial development.

The document also offered expressions of concern on a global range of issues, from energy prices to economic recession, the plight of Asian and African refugees and the difficulties of small countries.

But the main emphasis was the black-white power struggle in southern Africa.

The communique incorporated the leaders' agreement on principles to guide Britain in its pledge to convene an all-party conference on Zimbabwe Rhodesia next month and draft a new black majority constitution leading to a ceasefire and supervised democratic elections.

But the conference dealt skimpily with the parallel power struggle between black guerrillas and a white-controlled regime in nearby Namibia, expressing an "earnest hope" that current British-led settlement talks would expedite genuine independence.

It simply noted that the United Nations charter provides for an economic boycott of South Africa, the governing power in Namibia, if it defies pressure for majority rule.

Clark, who played mainly a look-and-listen role at his first Commonwealth conference, said he found it personally helpful to meet and talk with so many leaders from different parts of the world.

Because the conference ended a day early, he has a day off — a pool party is planned at the residence of Canadian High Commissioner Victor Moore — before making flying visits to Tanzania and Kenya. He returns to Ottawa late Sunday.

He said the main point of the conference, the agreement to proceed with another all-party meeting on Zimbabwe Rhodesia, was important because "it has broken the back of the problem."

While saying he believes the move will be fruitful, he cautioned that he does not expect any sudden dramatic resolution of the problem.

Sihanouk may set up French gov't-in-exile

TOKYO (UPI) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's former king, prime minister and head of state, is considering setting up a government-in-exile in France, a Japanese newspaper said today.

The former head of state was ousted from power in 1970 by the pro-American Prime Minister Lon Nol. He fled to Peking and formed a goverment-in-exile and returned briefly to power when the communist Khmer Rouge seized Phnom Penh in 1975.

The newspaper Sankei Shimbun, quoting Cambodian sources in Paris, said Sihanouk, 56, is scheduled to arrive in Paris Friday from North Korea where he is now living.

It said Sihanouk ostensibly is to attend a meeting of Cambodian refugees in France, but it is believed that he and his supporters will discuss establishment of a government in exile there, Sankei Shimbun said.

The prince is traveling on a visa issued by the French embassy in Peking, according to diplomatic sources in Tokyo, but it is not known whether the French government has agreed to the establishment of a Cambodian government-in-exile in Paris.

Sihanouk has called for an international conference to seek an immediate halt of fighting in Cambodia between Vietnamese-backed Cambodians and the Khmer Rouge forces loyal to the toppled pro-Peking Premier Pol Pot.

Rhodesia plan facing determined opposition

Washington Post

LUSAKA, Zambia — Just one day after the Commonwealth conference agreed on a plan to try to solve the 14-year-old Rhodesia independence issue, some of the gloss began to fade.

One wing of the Patriotic Front forces fighting a 6-year-old guerrilla war laid down conditions Tuesday for a settlement that have long been unacceptable to the leadership of the white minority population in the unrecognized nation now known as Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Meanwhile, South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha said his government was "deeply disturbed" over the Commonwealth plan. He told a Nationalist Party meeting Monday night that events had "suddenly ,virtually overnight taken a very serious course."

Ireland peace plan quashed

LONDON (AP) — Protestant leaders in Northern Ireland and most of the British press denounced a plan by New York Gov. Hugh Carey for a three-way meeting in the United States on embattled Ulster.

"Hands Off," said The Daily Express. "Things in Ulster are bad enough without American politicians trying to get into the act."

The newspaper accused Carey and other Irish-American politicians such as Senator Edward Kennedy of interfering in Northern Ireland to woo the millions of U.S. voters of Irish descent.

The storm blew up on Monday when Carey, following a visit to Britain and Ireland, announced plans for talks in New York on the future of Northern Ireland, where 2,000 persons have been killed and more than 21,000 wounded in 10 years of Catholic-Protestant conflict.

Carey said Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins, and Foreign Minister Michael O'Kennedy of the Irish republic have agreed to his suggestion, and the British-Irish-American talks are tentatively scheduled for September.

Atkins said Tuesday that he agreed to consider a U.S. visit, but "at no time was there any question of 'negotiating' the future of Northern Ireland at such a meeting."

"The political future of the province is a matter for negotiation between Her Majesty's government, the Parliament at Westminster and the people of Ulster," he said after outraged Protestant leaders in Northern Ireland demanded assurances that Britain does not plan to barter on Ulster's future.

Among Protestants denouncing the Carey initiative was Rev. Ian Paisley, who said: "If Mr. Atkins is going to open negotiations with people outside Northern Ireland, then he is heading for trouble. The future of Northern Ireland is absolutely no business of Americans."

Bolivia's Guevara forms gov't today

Guevara is to be inaugurated today as head of Bolivia's first constitutional, democratic government in more than a decade.

The 68-year-old former foreign minister was elected by congress Monday for a one-year term. The congress has scheduled new presidential elections for May 8, 1980, for a four-year term beginning on Aug. 6 of the same year.

Guevara said his first concern as president is to establish a stable democracy and his second priority is refinancing Bolivia's $3 billion foreign debt.

He said his administration will have a centre-left political alignment and his cabinet will include leaders of other political fronts which participated in the elections as well as members of his National Revolutionary Movement.

Guevara said he believed the return to democracy in Bolivia, a landlocked country which borders five others, would have a major impact on other South American countries ruled by dictatorships.

Bolivia is the first of three military-ruled Andean nations to complete its democratization process.

Ecuador will return to democracy on Friday when president-elect Jaime Roldos is inaugurated as the first constitutional president in nearly 10 years.

Peru has scheduled national elections for May 18, 1980, ending the 12-year-old dictatorship on July 28 of the same year.

Washington Post

MANAGUA — Despite U.S. efforts to cultivate Nicaragua's new revolutionary government, the guerrilla-backed administration has continued to denounce "Yankee imperialism" as the root of all Third World evil and to display strong anti-U.S. sentiment.

Recent statements by leaders of the civilian junta, the Sandinista National Liberation Front and the government press reflect the antagonism toward Washington that has developed during more than 40 years of authoritarian rule by the U.S.-supported Somoza family.

While the United States maintains it is attempting to start the new relationship off on a different footing, Nicaragua's new leaders have found it difficult, or at least inexpedient, to accept any change publicly.

Barricada, the Sandinista newspaper that is currently the only one published here, has shown an increasing tendency to portray the success of the Nicaraguan revolution as a defeat for "U.S. imperialism."

In a recent commentary on the revolution's impact on the world and especially Latin America, the paper referred to the Organization of American States as the "Department of State's Ministry of Colonies." It noted there have been "important changes" in Central America "in which those who resist imperialist aggression have not been exterminated."

The only foreign news printed in Barricada is based on Prensa Latina, the Cuban wire service that freely interchanges references to the United States with synonyms such as "the imperialists" or "the reactionary forces."

At a news conference Saturday night, junta member Alfonso Robelo appeared to blame the Carter administration for a shortfall in international food aid to Nicaragua, despite the fact that the United States has provided more emergencynon any other nation.

Robelo charged that Washington had not lived up to its promises to provide substantial quantities of emergency food and said, "I cannot help but think this is due to political considerations."

Vietnam refugees in punch-up with Aussie workers

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI) — About 300 Vietnamese boat refugees fought a pitched battle with more than 200 dockworkers over the visit of two trade unionists from their communist homeland.

No serious injuries were reported, but the faces of many of the brawlers were bloodied in the fighting Monday outside the Waterside Workers' Federation.

Police said four Vietnamese and five Australians were arrested.

The protesting refugees arrived early Monday at the headquarters of the Waterside Workers Federation and tried to drag the two Vietnamese trade unionists from their car.

Dockworkers rushed from the Federation hall, pushing and shoving the protesters back to clear a path for Nguyen Thuyet, general secretary of the Vietnam Trade Union Federation, and Do Tong Hop, an official in the union's international department.

At least six screaming Vietnamese wielding sticks ran across the street and began hitting the dockworkers, who chanted "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh," police said.

A Vietnamese, who did not want to be identified, said the dockworkers struck back with billard cues.

"Many of our people had blood all over their faces," he said. "I was pushed to the ground and punched. It was terrifying."

Inside, the Vietnamese and Australian unionists held brief talks.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♣	Pass	1♠	2♡
Pass	3♡	Pass	4♡

Opening lead — nine of spades.

In many deals, declarer can tell from the bidding or play the high cards that each defender holds in a particular suit. Knowing their location is frequently crucial to the play of a hand. If declarer neglects to take advantage of this type of information, he will sometimes come home lame as a result.

Consider the present deal where the contract was four hearts and West led a spade. Declarer covered West's nine with the ten and won East's jack with the king. It was now only trick one, but the contract was irretrievably lost!

After drawing trumps, South led the diamond king, taken by West with the ace. Back came the spade duece and declarer then had to lose two spade tricks and a club to go down one.

Now let's go back to South's first play from dummy. Let's say he had played the queen of spades on the line. In that case, if East ducked, South would ultimately score both the queen and the king of spades.

If East took the spade queen with the ace, he could not afford a spade return because of dummy's ten. This restriction on East's play at trick two would later prove fatal to the defence. Whatever else East returned, South eventually would be able to discard a spade on dummy's fourth diamond and so make the contract.

Declarer can easily read, at trick one, that West has led his highest spade, the nine, and that East therefore has the A-J. South is therefore in position to hamper the attack on his spades by playing the queen from dummy.

At the same time, declarer can also tell that West's opening bid was based on the ace of diamonds and a club suit probably headed by the A-Q-J. Playing the queen of spades at trick one is therefore practically certain to do the job.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Analyze, piece together clues, bits of information. You can come up with complete story. Accent on work, health, dependents and special services. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives are much involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make adjustment in home, domestic area — be kind to one who "strayed" from budget. Accent on creative endeavors, young persons, impulsiveness, change, variety and romance. Taurus, Libra, another Scorpio figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be positive of quotes, rights and permissions, property values, safety devices. Pisces, Virgo and the number 7 figure prominently. Real estate, interest rates and taxes command more-than-usual attention. Double check!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your best qualities surge to forefront. Those who doubted your sense of humor will be surprised. Accept challenge, responsibility. Older individual becomes valuable ally. Short trip could be on agenda.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin, strive for "pulse of public." Aries, Libra figure in scenario; money picture is brighter than you originally thought possible. One close to you "proves loyalty" and you regain sense of direction, purpose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle high; you can be at right place at crucial moment. Take initiative, highlight originality, independence, willingness to go forth "with a message." Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Trust our own judgment, intuition!

IF AUGUST 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you seem to have secret of sensing what people expect and need. Others are drawn to you with their problems. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. In October, you make emotional and financial comeback. You are dynamic, dramatic, stubborn, attractive and original.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1226 for the game today. One 6, two 2s and one 1. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers. For example, 62-1+2 is a solution for 63.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 94, with 91 a possible challenge. I shall be glad to check solutions.

FRASER BISCOE'S PIERS ISLAND SEAFRONT OFFERINGS

If you have not yet discovered "PIERS", Western Canada's most unique planned summer cottage community and want complete details about this fascinating "Island in the Sun", almost on the doorstep of the Saanich Peninsula — Call without obligation — below are four current offerings:

A SEAFRONT LOT

With a good view, well treed, a level lot for building and just a few steps down to the fascinating shell and shale beach formations. Located five minutes' stroll from the Island's favoured swimming beach. This is a lot where you can "do your own thing" over a period of time — create a summer place or future retirement home. A place where a family do-it-yourself project can build a sound investment. $35,700.

ARTIST OR WRITER

Will appreciate this Eagle's Eyrie — a 400 sq. ft. cottage perched on the most commanding view site on Piers Island. Yes! It has a western exposure and you can see the sun set behind Mt. Taum on Salt Spring, breathtaking seaviews up Satellite Channel of Cherry Point and Cowichan Bay. The combined living room-kitchen area features a natural field-stone fireplace and stainless steel sink. Electric heating. Separate bedroom and three-piece bathroom. A wrap-around patio to appreciate the 180 deg. view. On one of the island's largest lots a winding path approaches the cottage through cool glades lush with fern and shaded by tall timber. The agile will use the existing rugged path to the good beach below while the more sedate will use nearby accesses or improve the path down to a more acceptable standard. All-in-all, a unique retreat — at only $48,500.

SOUTHEAST EXPOSURE

Convenient to the Piers Island dock — this spacious family cottage of some 1,200 square feet is in a setting of juniper, fir and arbutus.
A sheltered 35' deck traps the sun all day and early evening and the 180 deg. view is centered on Canoe Pass and other Gulf Islands.
The house would be practical for summer or year' round use and is electrically heated and has a large Acorn free-standing fireplace in the A-shaped living room with a cheery stove in the family room. Sliding glass doors open on to patios front and rear. Lino floors for easy summer upkeep. Large enclosed porch area for storage, deep freeze, workshop, etc.
There are two conventional bedrooms and the third is a loft area in the A-frame portion with magnificent view. Four-piece bathroom, electric HW tank, fully furnished ready to turn the key in the lock and move in and start living. Price $64,500.

MAGNIFICENT 180 DEG. VIEW

Of the passing parade of Yachts, Coastal Shipping and Ferries. This eight-year-old cottage is nicely furnished, has three bedrooms, sliding glass door onto a large patio and free-standing fireplace. Just a few steps below the patio is a shell and shale beach. The cottage is electrically heated. Gross taxes $392.78. Full Price $66,500.
For appointment to view call R. Fraser Biscoe, F.R.I., R.I.(B.C.), Seafront Specialist Realtor, 383-9413 anytime. FRASER BISCOE, Penthouse Office, Executive House, 777 Douglas St., Victoria.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

EK - Wayne, passed away August 6th, 1977. Aged 14.
His smiling way and pleasant face,
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
Always remembered by his mother, brothers, Glen and Alan, Christine and Valerie and friends.

FIDO - Arthur E. passed away August 8, 1974. Sadly missed by his wife Gwen, son Arthur, and girls.

MARKUSICH - In loving memory of John, a loving husband, father and grandfather, who passed away six years ago today.
Gone, dear father, gone forever;
How we miss your smiling face,
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.
Always remembered by wife Magda, son Mike, daughters Mary, Ann, Helen, Nada and families.

SHORT - In loving memory of Doreen, who passed away August 8, 1977.
We are sad within our memory
Lonely are our hearts today;
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
We think of her in silence,
No eye may see us weep;
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
Sadly missed by husband Bernie, daughters; Sherry, Sandra, sons: Joe, Gordon, John and friend Sandy Barber.

In memory of a dear daughter and sister Doreen Short, laid to rest two years ago.
Gone from us your smiling face.
You're happy, carefree ways.
The heart that won so many friends,
In happy but gone days,
The happy years we once enjoyed.
How sweet their memory still.
But, death has left a vacant place.
This world can never fill.
Sadly missed by her mother Minnie Smith and her sister Donna, brother Ron Albert and Bryan, sister-in-laws Louise and Sharon, brother-in-law Larry, plus nieces and nephews.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

With summer zing comes wasp's sting

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

If you think there have been more wasps, bees, yellow jackets, hornets or other kinds of stinging pests around this summer, you're right.

The victims, as well as hospital emergency staffs, are painfully aware just how bad the problem is.

If you've never been bitten, one victim's description of his own encounter with wasps might give you an inkling of what it's like.

"It was like someone tightening a red-hot piece of barbed wire around my leg," said the man, stung four times in the ankle.

In the vast majority of cases, the sting hurts and the subsequent swelling is painful, but ultimately, it all goes away.

In some cases, however, particularly if there has been an earlier encounter with the angry insects, the consequences of stings can be severe.

Hospital emergency staffs are unanimous in warning of the danger of being stung in the area of the throat, where swelling can constrict breathing passages. In these cases, it's best to seek medical help.

For most of us, however, a dose of antihistamine, available at your neighborhood drugstore, is enough to counter the effects of a sting reaction.

Cold compresses or soaking the sting area in cold water will help ease the pain. An excellent first-aid treatment is a paste made of water and meat tenderizer (baking soda will also do) applied to the sting area.

That takes care of the sting. The obvious question is, where are all the pests coming from?

One thing is certain, the hot, dry weather in the spring certainly helped put the sting into summer. And if the hot weather continues into an Indian summer, then the wasps will stay.

According to Dr. R. D. Akre, an entomologist at Washington State University, during the warm months the queen wasp builds her nest, lays eggs and feeds larvae as she goes. If it is cold, most eggs die, but the warm weather has improved the survival rate this year.

Those survivors appear to have a fair scoring record and health officials here and throughout B.C. report higher-than-normal numbers of persons being treated for wasp stings.

Dr. G. G. Skidder, a University of B.C. entomologist, says the best treatment is prevention — wasps won't attack unless they're provoked.

Persons should not move suddenly when in the company of a wasp and should not try to swat them. Anyone trying to move a wasp's nest should cover his face, arms and legs to prevent a sting, he said.

Swath of demolished homes, smashed cars, broken trees shows path of tornado

Tornado ravages Ontario

Times News Services

WOODSTOCK, Ont. — A tornado funnel that ripped across southwestern Ontario as dusk fell Tuesday left residents sorting through the remains of their homes in the midst of incredible devastation today.

Provincial police said that one man was killed in the Woodstock area and a woman was killed and another person was missing in the Brantford area.

William Snyder, 51, of Norwich, was killed while driving his van along a country road southeast of Woodstock. Police said the van was lifted by the wind, had its roof ripped off, and was thrown into a field.

Corrie Rykeson, 33, of Harley, in the southwest corner of Brant County, died when the tornado hit her farm home. Her nine-year-old daughter, Annita, was injured and admitted to hospital.

The Woodstock district was officially declared a disaster area today by the provincial cabinet, making the area eligible for financial aid.

Requests from the area and the extent of provincial help required were to be discussed further when government officials had completed an examination of the destruction.

Premier William Davis said a coordinator will be appointed for the area to direct provincial services being provided and to speed up aid from the province.

The destruction started when two twisters ripped into the county at about 7 p.m. Tuesday.

A large one split up at Tavistock, north of Woodstock, and swung in a southeasterly direction toward the community of Bright. The more powerful of the two went through the southwest end of Woodstock, through the community of Oxford Centre and then curved around New Durham.

Provincial police said damages could run well into the millions of dollars depending on how much damage was done to three manufacturing plants that were hard hit by the twister.

A grocery store was moved off its

The regional climate data centre which has operated out of Victoria's Gonzales Observatory for more than half a century is to be moved to the new federal environment services headquarters in Marpole.

The key function of the weather station will be transferred this fall, the Times has learned.

The move is scheduled to be completed by Oct. 1 and the facility will be closed to the public.

Weathermen feel the switch will mean a severe interruption in some weather records which have been maintained continuously since the station opened in 1914.

Information such as the number of sunshine hours and wind gust data will no longer be kept on a seven-day a week basis.

In addition, the station, a prime tourist spot noted for its panoramic view of Greater Victoria, will no longer be open to the public after the move is made.

Brian Small, manager of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said he was saddened by the loss.

"Gonzales is a traditional landmark in the community. Some good community use should be found for it to keep it open."

The relocation of the data centre has been talked about by the federal government for years.

However, Defence Minister Allan McKinnon and Conservative MP Don Munro both voiced opposition to the move whenever the matter was raised in the House of Commons.

Neither McKinnon nor Munro was available for comment this morning.

A spokesman for the weather service said the information gathered at the centre — it compiles all climatological reports in the province — is being computerized. The computer is located in Vancouver.

Up to now all of the reports have been processed manually.

The spokesman said the government rejected a proposal to install a computer terminal at Gonzales because it would have been too costly.

The reduction in staff at the station will impair the local weather observing program, the spokesman said.

Both sunshine hours and wind gust information are recorded on discs which have to be changed every 24

BCRIC sales brisk

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians sent their new company into the public stock trading lists in fine fashion Tuesday and today was even better. Shares were trading at 11 a.m. today at $6.50.

The long-awaited first day of trading in B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) shares kept Vancouver Stock Exchange staff, floor traders and brokers busy throughout the day.

Trading in BCRIC shares started today on the Toronto Stock Exchange, but because there are virtually no sellers of shares outside B.C., trading volume there will depend on how much buying interest there is.

At the closing bell, 587,984 shares had changed hands, opening at $6⅛, the high for the day, dipping to a low of $5⅞, and closing at $6.10.

The only discordant note came in a noon-hour demonstration by about 30 native Indians who arrived at the exchange, beating a drum, chanting Indian songs and carrying placards.

They were protesting trading in BCRIC shares, which they said is a giveaway of resources that rightfully belong to Indians.

Massive Etna blast feared as gas mounts

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) - Scientists said today dangerous gas pressures are building up inside Mount Etna and the volcano, which has been erupting for the past five days and blackened beaches with its ash, could explode at any time.

The warning came from a team of experts, led by volcanologist Haroun Tazieff of Belgium, that has been studying the 3,250-metre mountain since it began its most spectacular eruption in 20 years last Friday.

"So far the eruption has continued without the escape of the gases inside Etna," Tazieff told reporters. "This mass of trapped gas could open new craters on the slopes of the volcano or perhaps cause a violent explosion."

The volcano, Europe's mightiest and most tempestuous, was spewing lava from three separate craters, two of them near the summit and one lower down the slopes above the evacuated village of Fornazzo.

Lava reached to within 90 metres of Fornazzo Tuesday but scientists said the front of the lava flow had solidified and molten lava was about 3 kilometres from the village today.

Though the village appeared out of immediate danger, officials said the lava so far had destroyed about 1,024 acres of apple, nut and olive orchards that provide a livelihood for its residents.

"This eruption is the most unusual we've seen since we've had modern instruments to study Etna," Tazieff said. "It's behavior makes it impossible to make any predictions."

The latest activity of the volcano, which has killed 1 million people in its 2,400 years of recorded history, is puzzling experts.

Strike may cut ferries

The B.C. Ferries Corp. will have to begin cancelling sailings if it is unable to get more diesel fuel by Friday, a spokesman for the Crown corporation said today.

Information officer Betty Nicholson said the ferries have been kept running to this point in a strike by truck drivers employed by three major oil companies on fuel supplied by Shell.

However, Shell, not directly involved in the contract dispute with the Teamsters union, has told the corporation the company can't promise any more fuel.

Nicholson said the ferry corporation is now atrempting to line up deliveries from its usual suppliers — the three struck companies, Gulf, Chevron and Imperial.

If more supplies are arranged, she said, no ferry cancellations will be necessary.

The corporation is concerned that if the struck companies attempt to deliver their product to the terminals, the teamsters wil picket and shut down the ferry operation completely.'

In an effort to stave off this possibility, Nicholson said the corporation will apply to the Labor Relations Board on Thursday for an order preventing any picketing of ferry operations.

She said the application will be made on the basis

Cancer trace rocks scotch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tiny traces of cancer-causing agents have been found by researchers in six brands of scotch whisky, the U.S. National Science Foundation says. The agents, called nitrosamines, apparently form while barley malt is drying.

But an industry group responded to the report Tuesday by saying the researchers' measurements differ from those of the World Health Association and "this may raise questions about the accuracy."

The scotches found to contain nitrosamines are Chivas Regal, Black and White, JB, Ballantine, Sandy Scot and Cutty Sark. No nitrosamines were found in White Label. Those were the only brands tested.

Nitrosamines have caused cancer in laboratory animals. Scientists say that, while there is no direct evidence they produce cancer in humans, nitrosamines should be considered as though they did.

Meanwhile, Dr. Perce McKinley, director-general of Canada's health protection branch, says minute traces of cancer-causing agents found in Canadian brands of beer do not create a serious health hazard.

Tradesmen want more

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of forest industry tradesmen is trying to re-open contract negotiations even though master agreements between forest companies and the two biggest unions have been signed.

The group, calling itself the B.C. Forest Industry Tradesmen's Association and claiming 5,000 members in three unions, said Tuesday it will hold a 24-hour study session Friday to press its demands for higher wage revisions for tradesmen.

But Don Saunders, chairman of Forest Industrial Relations Ltd. and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau which negotiate on behalf of forest products companies, said: "The industry has no intention of re-opening the agreements. Industry negotiations have been concluded with the three unions."

Mair releases Shaffer report

Environment Minister Rafe Mair released Tuesday a report critical of the proposed Cheekye-Dunsmuir power transmission line to Vancouver Island from the Sechelt Peninsula but said the government plans to go ahead with the project anyway.

During the last session of the legislature, Mair said the report by economist Marvin Shaffer didn't exist.

Later he acknowledged its existence but said the government wouldn't pay for it. Now he says the government will ignore it.

The report disputes a claim by B.C. Hydro that the 500-kilovolt transmission line to Vancouver Island is the most economic alternative to supplying power to its customers there.

Shaffer says more studies should be carried out before a decision on the project is made and suggests Hydro studies overestimated future electricity needs in the area for both commercial and residential customers.

Mair said he doesn't mean to demean the report but there are as many opinions as there are experts on matters of this kind.

The minister said the power is needed and the government will go ahead with plans to build the line as negotiations will continue with local residents on its route.

In Vancouver, Hydro announced that a $235 million contract for the supply and installation of underwater electric power cables for the line has been awarded to two European companies.

Hydro said that Industrie Pirellia of Italy and Standard Telefon Kabelfabrik of Norway will handle the project.

The circuit, including substations, will cost an estimated $406 million and the project is necessary, Hydro said in a news release, because of possible future power shortages on Vancouver Island.

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian pension funds invested in mortgages outperformed the Toronto stock market's TSE 300 index in the 10 years to June 30, a study shows.

The study by B. J. Vincent Co. Ltd., a Toronto actuarial consultant, shows that 10 of the 12 mortgage pension funds surveyed had an annual yield higher than that of the TSE 300 index, which rose at an annual rate of nine per cent during the 10-year period.

The top performer was the Canada Permanent Mortgage fund. Based on a lump sum payment of $1,000 in 1969, the fund would show a value of $2,672 after 10 years for a 10.3-per-cent annual yield.

Based on equal monthly payments over the 10 years, the Canada Permanent fund would show a 10.6-per-cent annual yield.

On this basis, all of the 12 mortgage funds surveyed had a higher annual rate than the TSE 300 index, with the lowest rate at 9.4 per cent.

The survey also covered 12 funds invested in bonds and of these, four outperformed the index on a lump sum payment basis. Quebec Trust, the best performer, showed a 9.9-per-cent annual yield.

On a monthly payment basis, the top bond fund, Royal Trust, showed a 9.6-per-cent yield and six of the 12 funds did as well as or better than the index.

Stock ticker goes modern

NEW YORK (AP) — A computerized version of the old stock ticker will be available soon in homes and offices as a result of a link between The Associated Press and Dow Jones and Co. Inc.

An investor who wants to know the price of his or her stocks will be able to turn to a table-top computer terminal, press a few keys and the issues and prices will appear on a TV-like screen, as trading is going on.

To provide this service, the AP has made available through the Dow Jones News Retrieval Service its database of daily market quotations.

Subscribers to the Dow Jones service will be able to retrieve from AP's market computers price quotations for stocks, bonds, options and other securities by using timeshare or low-cost computer terminals.

The Dow Jones News Retrieval Service has several thousand subscribers, most of them businesses. It provides, in addition to market quotations, breaking stories from the Dow Jones wire, corporate information, industry information and economic news.

Daniel Damov, president of Travelers Group of Toronto, said the companies are caught between the pressures of rising claims costs resulting from inflation and unduly low premium charges that have not kept pace.

"Because of the economic slowdown and fierce competition for business among companies, pressures for premium increases are building and accelerating and these factors should come together early next year," he said in an interview.

But the move toward high prices and tight markets depends entirely on how soon the insurers react to the situation, he added.

Industry spokesmen agree that a crunch is coming but disagree in predicting when it will come.

TD offers top rate

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Dominion Bank announced today that it will introduce a new savings account with interest calculated daily on Sept. 4.

The daily interest savings account will pay an annual interest of 9.5 per cent, highest currently being offered by the five major Canadian banks that have introduced daily interest accounts.

Interest will be calculated on daily balances and credited semi-annually. To be eligible, accounts will be required to have aminimum daily balance of $100. The new account will provide one free withdrawal a month.

MONTREAL (CP) — C.P. the pig is a capable animal. "He can do anything a dog can do," his trainer says. "He obeys orders. He sits. He heels. He'll even eat out of your mouth."

Oh?

"He's very intelligent, completely house-trained and very well-behaved."

What's more: C.P. is a guard-pig.

A what?

Well, a watch-pig, then.

M. D. Leblanc, a professional police dog trainer from British Columbia, bought C.P. two months ago, intending to fatten him up. But then he noticed that C.P. was picking up tricks faster than the dogs he was training. So now he's showing him around the country, trying to convince people C.P. would be better to have around the home for protection than a dog.

"If they get you, watch out. A big pig can gnaw its way through concrete and crush your fingers like matchsticks."

Leblanc says C.P. has already fought a vicious battle with a Doberman and won.

C.P. didn't even look up.

"It must be the wind," Leblanc explained. "It's blowing in the wrong direction."

Suddenly, C.P. looked up, reared back and charged . . . then slowed down again and nibbled on more grass.

Leblanc looked pleased.

"Some of the pigs they have on television," he said, "are nothing compared to this one. All they do is open things with their noses; but this one can heel, sit up and do all kinds of tricks.

"He likes disco music, he can hop onto a table, and he's also fluently bilingual."

Kamloops cop-kicker fined $800

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A woman who went on a drinking spree which culminated when she kicked a policeman was fined a total of $800 Tuesday after she pleaded guilty to four charges.

Court was told that employees of a city liquor store refused to sell the woman alcohol June 23.

Judge William Diebolt fined Cowan $250 for impaired driving, $450 for refusing to take a breath test, $100 for resisting a police officer and gave her a six-month suspended sentence for causing a disturbance.

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Supporters of Galindo Madrid, a Chilean refugee, who fears he will be killed if deported, have likened assurances by the Chilean government that Madrid will not be harmed if he returns home to "crocodile promises."

Darryl Adams, a member of the Galindo Madrid Defence Committee, said Tuesday he hopes the federal government will not send the 22-year-old refugee back to Chile on the word of a government which "has lost credibility in the international community."

"It's a crocodile promise, not worth the paper it's printed on and we trust the minister will consider the new information we gave him" and let Madrid remain in Canada, Adams said.

Joaquin Grubner, Chilean consul in Vancouver, said he has received word from his embassy in Ottawa that the Chilean regime is willing to let the Canadian government keep tabs on the refugee through the Canadian embassy in Santiago to make sure no harm comes to him.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson, who has taken the young refugee's fight to Immigration Minister Ron Atkey last week, has said an "L" on Madrid's passport means he is a marked man who faces certain torture and death if he returns to Chile.

Atkey is studying the new evidence and has given Madrid assurances he will not be deported without "reasonable time" to find a third country to take him as a refugee.

Since he jumped ship in nearby Squamish in March, 1977, Madrid has been trying to win political refugee status, but all attempts so far have failed.

Wolf, bear poisoning approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial fish and wildlife branch has been given pesticide control branch approval to poison wolves, coyotes and bears — a move which reopens a long-simmering controversy in British Columbia.

The permit approves the use of the poisons 1080 (sodium monofluoroacetate) and cyanide to control bear, coyote and wolf on private and public land.

The main condition is that the poison use be restricted "to specifically reported and confirmed instances of problem predators killing, damaging, or harassing livestock, damaging property or crops, or threatening human safety."

The poisons cannot be used on private land without the approval of the owner or occupant. And the chemical 1080 must not be used for bear control.

"I'm sure that B.C. is now the only place in the world were wolves are poisoned," said George Clements of the Association for the Protection of Fur Bearing Animals.

He said that last March Environment Minister Rafe Mair announced a two-year study in northern B.C. to determine the true extent of wolf predation on livestock.

Clements said he is shocked that the poison permit should be issued when this study is still going on and its results are not yet known.

The wolf poisoning controversy arose in B.C. in early 1978 when poisoning resumed in the Burns Lake area for the first time in 10 years because of increasing complaints from sheep and cattle ranchers.

There were also claims by biologists that wolves were decimating the caribou population in B.C.

Ray Halladay, chief of wildlife management for the branch, said Tuesday he is well aware that the issuing of the permit will probably revive the controversy over poisoning.

He said the poison will only be used in areas where there is a "chronic livestock problem."

"The minister has reaffirmed government policy to minimize livestock losses with limited use of poisons."

Vancouverite gets extension

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government says it has decided to give George Spanoudis of Vancouver until Friday afternoon to come up with the money for the cruise ship Mercator One.

The purchase of the ship was to be concluded last Friday, but provincial Development Minister Roland Thornhill said in a statement Tuesday that Spanoudis has had difficulties in getting the $3 million in U.S. currency.

A group of businessmen headed by Spanoudis has already given the province a non-returnable deposit of $300,000 in U.S. funds.

Thornhill's statement said that, as the group had made a deposit, it was in the best interests of Spanoudis and the province to allow the group additional time. He did not elaborate.

It is the second extension granted the Spanoudis group. In early July the government granted him an extension when he suffered a heart attack.

The cruise ship has been a thorn in the side of two successive governments.

The former Liberal government was blamed by the opposition for poor judgment in allowing Mercator Enterprises Ltd. of Halifax $5.9 million in mortgage funds and working capital to launch the cruise ship operation in 1976.

MAGI finally foreclosed on the mortgage and seized the ship in 1977 when the initial cruises in the Caribbean were unsuccessful.

Since coming to office last September, the Progressive Conservative government has been trying to sell the vessel.

Meanwhile, Lynn Helpard, president of Cruise Centre International Ltd. of Montreal, said his company wants to buy the Mercator for a "reasonable" price of about $2 million.

"We have been interested in buying the Mercator for some time," he said. "However, the province doesn't seem to take our offer or our deals seriously."

He said his company felt the $3.5 million asking price for the Mercator was exorbitant.

White water kayaking like this attracts many

By JANE COVERNTON
Times Staff

The promise of adventure on the sea and on swirling white water rivers is creating a small boom in kayak and white water canoe sales on Vancouver Island.

But more and more people are venturing on to the sea in touring kayaks, exploring the Gulf Islands or the Broken Islands group in Barkley Sound.

A standard kayak, fully equipped, would cost about $500. The deluxe models could go as high as $1,000.

White water canoeing —shooting the rapids — is also becoming more popular, even though there are only a few suitable rivers on the island.

He says sales of the longer, narrower white water canoes are up about 20 per cent over last year.

A total outfit costs about $500.

"We get guys coming in who are still in school and guys who are retired. There are lots of husband-and-wife teams who want to spend time together. That's nice to see."

One reason is that more school teachers are learning how to canoe with the club and then taking their classes out.

Frank Johnson, who edits the VCC newsletter says, "In a canoe your partner can be 80 years old or 15 years old. It doesn't matter as long as you get along."

Johnson has been canoeing since he retired four years ago.

"For the first year, I was one of the people they rescued every time we went."

Now he's contemptuous of the popular canoe areas and keeps it a secret when he finds some special place.

"Canoeing on the West Coast Trail, you might as well put up traffic signs."

He says beginners should take lessons for their own safety.

Courses are offered by the Victoria Canoe Club, the YMCA, the University of Victoria and Camosun College.

Two small Indian boys named Clayton and Jimmy sat jammed into a single seat next to me. Though they yawned at regular intervals, they didn't fidget and both said they were enjoying the Cowichan Indian opera, Tzinquaw.

Jimmy wasn't quite sure what it was he liked about it but when I suggested the dancing, he said yep, that was it. And what was it that Clayton liked? "Everything!"

And that just about sums up the feeling of the packed house that gave the Indian cast a standing ovation Sunday night after the second and final performance in the new Duncan Theatre of the revived version of the first Indian opera in North America when it was presented in 1950.

Directed by Roberta Scotthorne, enhanced considerably by some fine piano playing from Gilbert Munroe, and featuring the traditional songs and dances of the Cowichan Indian Band, the show was a fine one, indeed.

You see, one of two men responsible for the first show 29 years ago — Indian Abel Joe — played the same starring role of Skeecullus (The Thinker) in the new version. And he has his own reasons for bringing the opera out of the mothballs of his mind.

The other person involved back then was white man Frank Morrison who wanted to preserve the songs and dances of the Cowichan Indians.

"I began in 1942 and it took four years to gain the confidence and co-operation of the Indians to allow me to make piano interpretations of their melodies and dance rhythms," Morrison wrote in the original program.

"Finally, through helping the Indians with their church music, I got Abel Joe to come to my home and sing Indian songs to me while I wrote down the nearest possible piano equivalents," he explained.

Morrison also translated the thoughts of the Indian people into English lyrics and the pair worked for another four years together before coming up with Tzinquaw.

It is the tale that is told by the O'whey-whey-ems (The Story-Tellers) of how, in the days of very long ago, Tzinquaw, the Thunderbird, and Quannis, the Killer Whale, did battle in the waters of Cowichan Bay.

Quannis, so the legend goes, for many weeks swam back and forth in the quiet waters and by his evil ways drove all the fish away. Then came the months of the fishing and there were no fish for the Indian people to catch. And the people grew weak from hunger. Some died and finally the Indians realized that they alone, with their paddles and spears and ropes, were not strong enough to kill Quannis.

Then Skeecullus called for help from the Schnayum (the Medicine Man) and with the rolling of thunder and flashing of lightning along came Tzinquaw, the Thunderbird, "to kill the evil whale and cast his body on the beach so that his Cowichan people may have food."

When Tzinquaw was produced in 1950, it was a hit. After playing in Duncan, the company took it on tour to Victoria, Vancouver and up north. If they can get a booking, the Cowichan Indian Players will bring the new version to Victoria once again.

"This is the first time Tzinquaw has been performed in 29 years," Abel Joe told the audience after Sunday night's show. "The late Frank Morrison and I worked hard for four years on this and I'm sure he'd be happy today that we have brought Tzinquaw back to the Cowichan people."

Backstage later, Abel told me he was one of seven of the original cast of 21 who were also in the new show. Most of the others in this show, he said, were younger generation Indians who weren't even born back then. And it was for them — the young people — he had decided to revive it.

Mindful of the alcohol problems and the rash of suicides that have plagued his band in recent years, Abel Joe said the young Indians need something to keep them busy and something to rekindle the interest in their culture.

"They have lost the language and have to learn it first before they can take part in a show like this," he said of the younger Indians. "And I've always said without the language there is no culture, so it is up to us to help them regain this."

"I didn't like to die with what I had made," he explained. "Frank Morrison has gone and I was the only one who could revive Tzinquaw for the younger generation. This means a lot to us and I hope they keep it going.

"There is not enough rain on earth to wipe out the footsteps of our ancestors and make us forget all about our culture . . ."

Ecology reserves designated

The provincial government today designated the Chain Islands off Oak Bay Marina and two nearby islets as ecological reserves.

Ecological director Bristol Foster said the Chain Islands reserve includes the seabed to a depth of five fathoms.

The rocky islands, well known to fisherman, are nesting habitat for large colonies of seabirds, including gulls, oyster catchers and cormorants.

"Scuba divers can explore the seabed around the islands but should not take anything out," Foster said.

Foster also said people should not walk on the islands at this time of year.

No baring on case

Saanich police today discounted a report that a woman accomplice exposed herself Tuesday to distract store employees while a knife-wielding companion robbed the Safeway store at University Heights shopping centre of $662.

First reports indicated the bandit was accompanied by a young woman who bared her breasts to distract the clerk's attention.

However, a police spokesman said that while a woman was seen walking through the store with her shirt open at the time, she was not involved in any way with the robbery.

Police said the bandit entered the store at 12:10 p.m. and approached clerk Laurie Gregory, 19, who was just closing her till to go on lunch break.

He produced a long-bladed knife and ordered her to fill a paper bag with bills from the till.

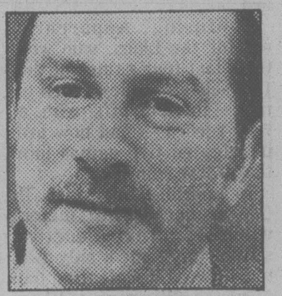
SHUNS CIVIL SERVANT LABEL

Mayhew relinquishes development reins



MAYHEW

Greater Victoria economic development commissioner Barry Mayhew Tuesday announced he will quit Oct. 31.

Mayhew has made no bones about the fact he is not happy with a proposal that the Capital Regional District take over the economic development commission.

He said he is resigning because he is going back to the private sector in Victoria to what he described as a "very exciting opportunity".

But he admitted that the possibility of having to function almost as a civil servant under the CRD had been a factor in his decision to quit.

He said as an employee of the CRD he would have a lot less opportunity to speak his mind, adding he has been criticized for speaking out on political decisions.

The CRD's economic development committee, headed by Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, is proposing that the economic development commission become a regional function with all components — municipalities and electoral areas — participating.

Commission board chairman Larry Ryan said Tuesday Sooke, which already has an economic development commission, would have the option of staying with its own organization or joining the regional district's commission.

Until now the commission has been funded by the four core municipalities and the provincial government. The move to make it a regional function came because there is doubt that the provincial government will continue to pay its share.

Ryan said Tuesday that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has said the commission would have a better chance of continued funding if it covered a wider area than the four core municipalities.

Mayhew noted there are 14 such commissions in B.C., all organized by the provincial government except Greater Victoria and one funded by Vancouver.

The other commissions, he said, received 90 per cent funding from the provincial government in the first year, 70 per cent in the next, 50 per cent the following year and weretotally funded by the regional districts in the fourth year.

Regional board chairman Murray Glazier said today the commission and Mayhew had come to the regional district asking that the function be taken over by the CRD in an effort to find a long-term solution to its funding.

Glazier said regional planning and economic development go hand in hand. He said the district had asked the commission to work out the terms of the transfer.

"It had to involve Mr. Mayhew coming to the CRD on some basis. He would have to adjust to that change," Glazier said.

"I don't want the function to become another committee here. It would have to be structured in such a way it has broad community support and is not lost in any bureacracy."

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said Tuesday if the position of economic development commissioner is not filled, the area will take a giant step backwards.

He said would-be developers are very skeptical of politicians and Mayhew had been successful because they viewed him as a consultant with no strings attached.

Small said he hoped any CRD economic development commission would function like the present one with representation from labor, the public service sector and other areas of the community.

Townsend service set

A memorial service will be held at First Memorial Services Ltd., 1030 Falaise Drive, at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, for Ernest Townsend, president of the B.C. Motel Resort and Trailer Park Association, who died suddenly on Saturday Aug.4.

A driving force in promoting the motel business, Townsend was also a director of the Victoria Information centre and the Langford Chamber of Commerce.

Prior to becoming involved in the motel business, he served as a machinist at Yarrows and HMCS Dockyard and later as a commercial fisherman off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

He was born in England and came to Victoria in 1951.

Antiquated system prompts water plea

An overloaded and antiquated water distribution system prompted the Central Saanich water committee Tuesday to ask residents north of Mills Road to restrict their use of water.

The distribution system in most sections of Central Saanich is well able to handle summertime loads, but there have been problems delivering water in the higher areas north of Mills Road.

Mayor George Westwood said that the committee is hoping to avoid imposing water rationing in the area.

"We're asking for the co-operation of the public to get us through this difficult period," he said.

Residents in the affected area are being asked to stop watering lawns and any non-essential use of water.

Westwood said there was no single problem. Rather, it is a series of weaknesses in the sysmtem that is creating the shortages.

There is no probiem with the water supply itself, as the municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney are now served by a pipeline that brings water from the Sooke Hills watershed.

Lost jobs blamed on economy

A major equipment and supply dealer today said the economy and devalued Canadian dollar have contributed to the closure of several operations and the loss of about 130 jobs.

Claude Butler, president of Butler Bros. Supplies Ltd., 2046 Keating, said the firm is consolidating and devoting its energies to the development of new machinery lines to serve the construction, heavy equipment, logging and transportation industries.

In the past year the company payroll has fallen from 265 employees and distributors in the U.S., Alberta and B.C. have closed, including those at Kamloops and Parksville. The firm's Langley branch will close shortly, Butler said.

Part of the difficulty is with foreign manufactured equipment on which the rate of monetary exchange has in some cases wiped out profit margins.

The American closure is not necessarily permanent, Butler said.

Butler's operations customarily follow the general economy, rising and falling with conditions, but the remote businesses are more difficult to control, he said.

"We've been reorganizing and getting rid of the weak areas and building up the strong ones. I believe we can improve operations substantially," Butler said.

The equipment business on Vancouver Island will be run from Central Saanich because it is right next door to corporate headquarters, making it easier to control, he said.

Meanwhile the firm's retail and concrete mix businesses are going well and no changes are anticipated.

"Many things are changing in the company. There is a lot of potential and some new developments will be pursued actively," Butler said.

He referred to machines and components which had been proven successful and have aroused widespread interest.

These include a new four-axle suspension for heavy trucks, a new large capacity cement truck and the Mark V logging truck capable of carrying a 230-ton payload.

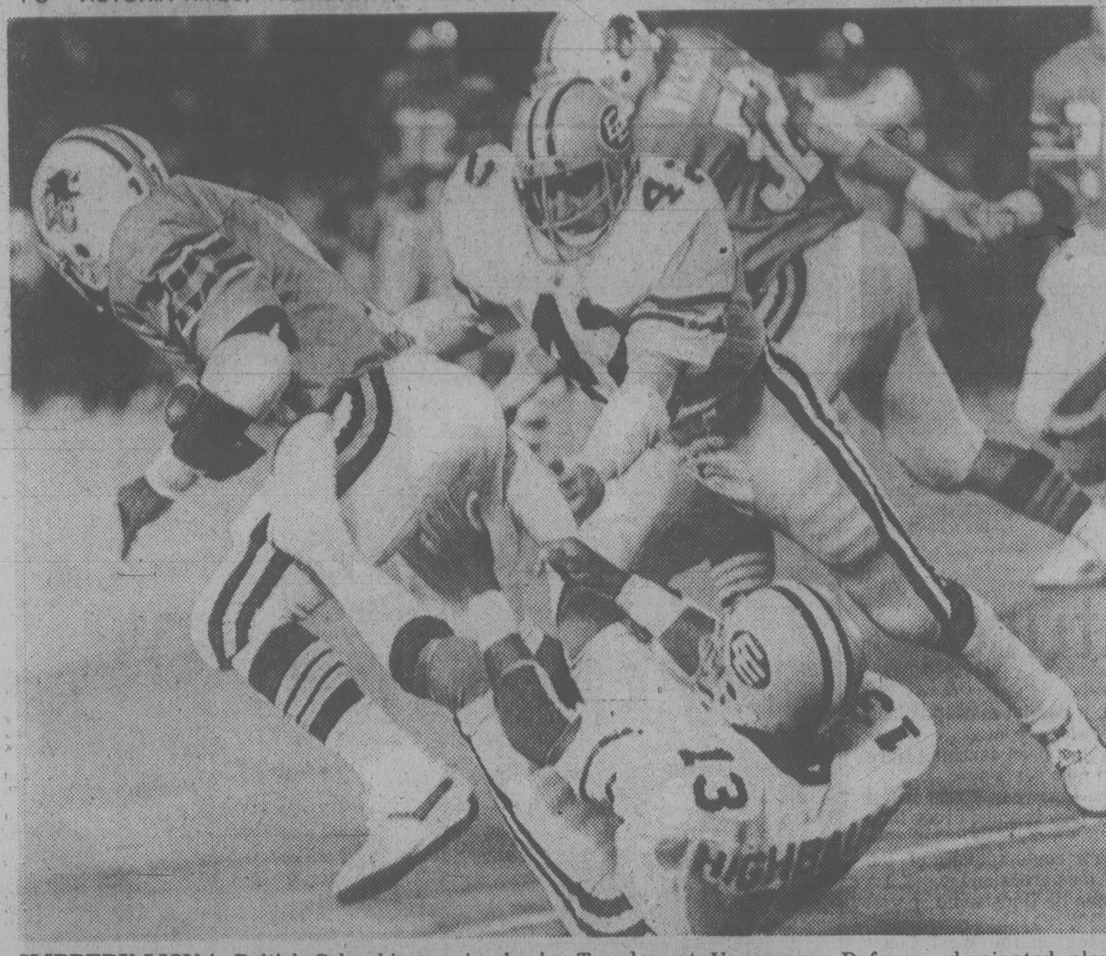
"We still believe in that unit," Butler said of the 1,000 hp vehicle which has attracted world-wide interest.

He was optimistic of the company's prospects. "We have a lot of exciting things on the drawing board. Our business is looking very good. I can't see any major problems."

Although there has been a period of years in which few large buildings have been constructed locally, Butler said the concrete business still has potential, particularly for such a competitive transport as Butler's four-axle truck that raised mixer capacity from 7¼ to 11¼ yards and has greatly improved steering to improve construction site access.

Butler said there are negotiations with a major company to produce components for this truck.

Campbell's riddle but Rapp's delight



SLIPPERY LION is British Columbia running back Larry Key, who escapes grasp of Edmonton cornerback Larry Highbaugh (13) and evades linebacker Dan Kepley during Canadian Football League game Tuesday at Vancouver. Defences dominated play most of night as Lions and Eskimos remained undefeated by battling to 14-14 deadlock before 30,137 fans, largest Vancouver crowd of season. (CP photo)

By The Canadian Press

A proud moment for British Columbia Lions was equally as sour for Edmonton Eskimos when the Canadian Football League's only undefeated teams collided Tuesday night in Vancouver.

"I've never been prouder of a football team which didn't win than I was of our team tonight," said coach Vic Rapp of the Lions, now 4-0-1. "That was two of the best efforts I've ever seen by two teams on the same field at the same time.

"We were lucky enough not to win," said Campbell, "and unlucky not to lose.

Confusing? Apparently not for the Lions, who won their last four games of the 1978 season — they failed to make the playoffs with a 7-7-2 record — and now are undefeated five games into the 1979 season.

In an Eastern Football Conference game, meanwhile, Montreal Alouettes scored the game's only two touchdowns in defeating the winless Winnipeg Blue Bombers 25-10 in an interlocking game at Montreal.

The Lions mounted a fierce pass rush in Vancouver and sacked Edmonton quarterbacks Tom Wilkinson and Warren Moon six times, with ends Drew Taylor and Louie Richardson getting two sacks each. Edmonton had averaged 41 points a game in its first three starts.

"We had a tough time keeping Moon from rolling out," said the boisterous Taylor, "and it really helped to have Louie back in the lineup.

"Wilkinson just goes down on the turf when he's trapped, but Moon is something else when he scrambles."

Moon replaced Wilkinson early in the game after Wilkinson sustained an ankle injury when rushed hard by the Lions, who also got sacks from tackle Rick Goltz and linebacker Ron Moorhouse.

Moon threw a 24-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Waddell Smith and running back Jim Germany rambled three yards for the other Edmonton touchdown. Dave Cutler converted both, but didn't get a chance to attempt any field goals.

Jerry Tagge fired a 16-yard scoring pass to Leon Bright for B.C.'s only major and Lui Passaglia got the other eight points on field goals of 24 and 46 yards, a 53-yard punt single and a conversion.

Edmonton twice had seven-point leads on the Lions, but B.C. kept battling back despite a lack of offence. Tagge was replaced briefly at quarterback in the second half by reserve Carlos Brown, who was just as unsuccessful.

The game ended with an exciting exchange of punts between Passaglia and Hank Ilesic of the Eskimos. Passaglia punted 48 yards to the Edmonton 38, from where Ilesic returned the kick 70 yards.

Passaglia bobbled the ball at the B.C. two-yard line, but managed to bounce the ball out of bounds as time ran out.

"I was confused for a moment and just tried to get the ball out of bounds," said the CFL's leading scorer with 62 points.

Edmonton had 18 first downs and a net offence of 224 yards after being thrown for 76 yards in team losses. B.C. had just 11 first downs and 211 yards net offence.

Montreal moved into first place in the EFC with a 3-2 record, two points ahead of both Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts, with a sound defensive effort against Winnipeg, now 0-4.

David Green rambled 17 yards for a touchdown on the last play of the third quarter before 41,232 Montreal fans, breaking a 7-7 tie, and Joe Barnes hit wide receiver Bob Gaddis with a 17-yard scoring pass in the final quarter.

Don Sweet kicked field goals of 39, 45 and 28 yards for Montreal, a pair of converts and a 41-yard single. Punter Wally Buono added a 47-yard single for the Als.

Bernie Ruoff accounted for all the Winnipeg scoring with field goals of 19, 42 and 48 yards and a 40-yard single. The Bombers had a touchdown by running back Larry Washington called back because of a holding penalty.

Big, early starts work for Mussels

Strike hard, strike quickly.

Mussels swept their Northwest Baseball League series from the Ems by doing just that in all three games at Royal Athletic Park, the latest being Tuesday's 13-6 triumph.

In all three games, the Victorians rocked their slumping rivals from the Southern Division in the first inning.

Tuesday, first baseman Emil Drzayich enabled Mussels to stick to the pattern with a booming, three-run homer. And the Mussels were off and running.

Victoria jumped off to 2-0 leads in two previous games. And, all in all, the Mussels out-scored Eugene 12-1 in the first three innings of the series.

Drzayich, handcuffed by Eugene pitching in the first two games, came back with a vengeance by going five-for-five to drive in five runs. The homer was Big D's eighth of the season.

John Caraher took the victory, his fourth, although he gave way to Roy Moretti in the sixth. It was Moretti's 31st appearance for Mussels in 49 games.

Caraher's six-inning stint was a welcome one for manager Bill Bryck. Illness and minor ailments have thinned Victoria's pitching ranks as the team moved away for an eight-game road trip that starts tonight in Medford.

Catcher Gary Ledbetter and pitcher Randy Holt are suffering with the flu. Tom Candiotti, who was scheduled to be Tuesday's starting pitcher, suffered an ankle sprain. In addition, outfielder Nick Belmonte is recovering from a more serious ankle injury (but is scheduled to return in a few days), utilityman John Frietas jammed a thumb and outfielder Chris Gandy is bothered by a sore arm.

Starting pitcher's injury opens up cans of worms

By Canadian Press

Everything would have gone without a hitch, except Caldwell didn't pitch. He warmed up, but after the Brewers batted in the first, Milwaukee right-hander Jim Slaton took the mound.

Caldwell, tackled by New York's Reggie Jackson in a game 11 days earlier, claimed a rib cage injury, and Weaver's protest was announced long before the Brewers beat his Orioles, 7-5.

Weaver insisted Caldwell was required to face at least one batter, but plate umpire Larry Barnett ruled that Caldwell, who had not pitched since the wrestling match with Jackson, had reinjured himself and could be replaced.

"Who's to say if the pitcher's hurt or not?" asked Weaver. "The umpires took Bamberger's word for it and never asked Caldwell to throw another pitch. They're opening up another can of worms."

One his best pitchers, Jim Palmer, has been on the injured list since July 16, but Weaver said Tuesday night he might reinstate his right-hander as starting pitcher every night.

"It might happen 47 straight times," said Weaver. "But Jim's arm has been tender, so who's going to argue with him if he can't pitch? Maybe, every fourth day, he'll stay out there."

Slaton lasted five innings and departed with a 5-4 lead.

In other AL games, Boston Red Sox bombed Cleveland Indians 12-3, Oakland A's upended California Angels 9-5, Minnesota Twins trimmed Seattle Mariners 5-2, Chicago White Sox downed New York Yankees 9-5, Toronto Blue Jays edged Kansas City Royals 3-2, and Detroit Tigers swept Texas Rangers, 3-1 and 8-2.

In the National League, Atlanta Braves edged Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Chicago Cubs clobbered Pittsburgh 15-2, St. Louis swept a pair from New York Mets 9-2 and 2-1, Los Angeles clipped Houston 10-8, San Francisco nipped San Diego 3-2 and Philadelphia slipped by Montreal 4-2.

The game turned out to be run-of-the-mill for the Brewers and Orioles — five home runs, three of them by Milwaukee. In their 11 meetings this season, the teams have combined for 37 homers.

Sixto Lezcano, Gorman Thomas and Dick Davis each hit two-run shots for the Brewers, who had lost seven of their last eight games. Lee May and Pat Kelly connected for the Orioles, with Kelly's blast marking his third of the year as a pinch-hitter.

Davis's homer, after he had fouled off two pitches while attempting to bunt, snapped a 5-5 tie in the eighth, sending Baltimore to its third consecutive loss.

They can talk without heat

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey Players Association and team owners held meetings which wound up Tuesday and discussed questions such as what happens to players assigned to the minor leagues, free agent status, international competition, and compulsory use of helmets.

Although the meetings really produced little new, Alan Eagleson, executive director of the players association said they were a success even if only "when these two groups can meet for two days without raised voices or bad tempers they've got to be a success."

A tentative schedule for this winter with the Soviet Union Red Army team and the Moscow Dynamos has been established between Dec. 26 and Jan. 10.

The army team will meet New York Rangers, New York Islanders, Quebec Nordiques, Buffalo Sabres and Montreal Canadiens while the Dynamos will play Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Vancouver Canucks and Washington Capitals.

Eagleson said there could be changes as players such as Toronto's Darryl Sittler would like to see action against the Russians. "Ballard (owner Harold Ballard) and Imlach (general manager Punch Imlach) are not really exuding enthusiasm about a game, but the Russians are most anxious to play both Toronto and Montreal for they still think of them as Canadian hockey," Eagleson said after the meetings.

Both Eagleson and NHL president John Zeigler said the question of equalization in the free agent situation, where a team has to compensate the team the player comes from, still had a lot left for discussion.

An agreement was reached that players sent to the minors should get his hotel bill paid for 28 days or get $20 a day expenses. Eagleson said teams often refused to compensate players.

There was nothing in the book until now.

And both sides agreed that helmets must be worn by players who signed professional contracts after June 1, 1979.

Munson's pact to pay widow million dollars

NEW YORK (AP) — Catcher Thurman Munson's contract with New York Yankees will pay his widow, Diane, $1 million over the next three years.

Munson, killed in the crash of his private plane last Thursday, was signed by the American League baseball team through 1981, receiving $400,000 a year. The contract was guaranteed and did not include the usual clause that absolves a team from payments in the event of death while flying a private plane.

"The contract is clear on this subject," said Dick Moss, Munson's lawyer. "I'm sure there will be no problem. The Yankees honor their agreements."

Burrards triumph in overtime battle

With two well-rested goalkeepers in the bank, Victoria Shamrocks are prepared to take on New Westminster Salmonbellies tonight at Memorial Arena.

The opening game of the best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association playoff semi-final is scheduled to start at 8.

Both veteran Larry Smeltzer and sophomore Scott Marshall are prepared but coach Bill Munroe isn't expected to name the starting netminder until tonight.

Vancouver led 5-3 by the end of the first period but the teams were tied 9-9 at the end of the second, and 15-15 at the end of the third.

Second game is Wednesday in Vancouver

Salmnbellies get victory as brawl shortens game

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies doubled Richmond Roadrunners 10-5 Tuesday in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League semi-final playoff game cut short by a third-period brawl.

Both benches cleared with 2:42 remaining in regulation time and the fisticuffs were enough to convince the referee to call the game, handing the Salmonbellies the win in the first game of the best-of-seven series.

Saanich bantams both suffer losses

LADNER (CP) — Vancouver, Brampton and Peterborough were tied Tuesday for the "A" division lead after two days of the national bantam lacrosse tournament.

All three had two wins and no losses in the eight-team division, one of three in which 28 teams from across Canada are competing.

In games Tuesday, Vancouver inched past Clarkson, Ont., 10-9 after one period of overtime; Brampton topped Coquitlam 11-10 and Peterborough defeated Saanich, 14-10.

Richmond routed Surrey, 12-3; Whitby dropped Vancouver 11-10 and Edmonton nipped Saanich, 10-9.

In the eight-team "C" division, North Delta, Kitimat and Saskatoon are deadlocked in first place with four points each.

The week-long tournament ends Saturday when the top two teams in each division play a championship final in nearby Delta.

Alfons Mayer tops riflemen

EDMONTON (CP) — Alfons Mayer of Kitchener, Ont., won the international-style prone-rifle event with 2,377 out of a possible 2,400 points Tuesday during the first day of the 1979 Canadian small-bore rifle championships.

The Ontario team was the top club in the prone-rifle event while the Alberta team won provincial honors.

Lakers claim Rocket to blame

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers for Los Angeles Lakers, defendants in a multi-million dollar damage suit, are attempting to prove that injuries suffered by Houston Rocket basketball star Rudy Tomjanovich were caused by the action of another Rocket player.

A five-man, one-woman federal court jury viewed — in black-and-white and color, in normal and slow-motion — a film of the National Basketball Association game between the Lakers and Rockets Dec. 9, 1977, in which Tomjanovich was hit in the face by the Lakers' Kermit Washington.

Defense attorney Robert Dunn told the jury that before Tomjanovich was hit, Rocket center Kelvin Kunnert had given Washington an elbow in the face.

A fight erupted, with the film showing Kunnert hit by Washington, who later was suspended for 60 days and fined $10,000 by the NBA commissioner Lawence O'Brien — both league records.

Kunnert, now a teammate of Washington on San Diego Clippers, said: "I never threw an elbow. Washington was holding onto my trunks during a fast break and I was just trying knock his hands away."

Earlier, Houston forward Robert Reid viewed the film and said it appeared to him that Kunnert had swung an elbow at Washington.

A Houston surgeon testified the face of Tomjanovich had to be rebuilt like "a jigsaw puzzle . . . like putting a cracked egg-shell back together with Scotch Tape."

Daniel C. Walker, an oral and face surgeon, said he had "never seen such damage made by a bare human fist."

The Rockets are seeking $1.4 million from the Lakers for the loss of Tomjanovich during most of the 1977-1978 season, and Tomjanovich is asking an unspecified amount, but more than $1 million.

Is anything safe to eat?

By FRED FERRETTI

Contrary to what most concerned consumers tend to believe, everything that artificially keeps processed foods looking or tasting good does not cause cancer. Nor does every chemical concoction that substitutes for natural food additives.

These are among the messages contained in a new 12-page booklet, entitled Does Everything Cause Cancer? A Food Safety Primer, published in Washington by the Center for Science in the Public Interest and written by Greta Bunin and Dr. Michael Jacobson.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest is a non-profit citizens' group founded in 1971 by Jacobson, who has a Ph.D. in microbiology from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and two other scientists. It has 15,000 members who pay $15 each a year and supports itself through those fees and through sales of its publications, devoted mostly to science and food.

Jacobson said the centre was "one of the groups that petitioned the Federal Trade Commission to ban junk food advertisements during hours set aside for children's television," a petition, he points out, "that hasn't lost yet."

Recently, charging that the food industry is "more interested in healthy profits than healthy consumers," Jacobson and Ralph Nader presided over the opening of a "Junk Food Hall of Shame" in downtown Washington.

The museum-style exhibition indicated some of the ailments that can be caused by poor diet — from cancer to constipation — and listed products that the sponsors of the exhibition considered deficient in food value. Among those cited for low nutritional value, high sugar content or high cost were Pop Rocks, Coca-Cola, Fruit Loops, Jell-O, Dream Whip, Shake 'n Bake, Lucky Charms, Trix, Frosted Flakes, Stovetop Stuffing, Cool Whip, Koolaid, Tang and Hawaiian Punch.

In 1972 Jacobson filed a petition with the Food and Drug Administration and with the Treasury Department to have the ingredients on alcoholic beverages noted on labels.

Summer squash: Eat 'em raw

The early picked fruits of summer squashes do not even need cooking to make them palatable. Their flavor and texture is so acceptable in the small sizes that they have absolutely no waste.

Picked at a size when the folded blossom is still attached to the end of the fruit, the stem is edible if you want to eat it along with the rest.

Summer squash are listed as Pattypan (also as Bush Scallop), Summer Crookneck and the green Zucchini. They appear occasionally in vegetable displays. To get these gourmet vegetables at their best grow them in a tub of soil on a balcony or a doorstep if necessary.

The fruits are so prolific in summer, requests come in for ideas on using them so that there is no waste and no monotony.

Young summer squashes are not peeled nor are the seeds removed. There is no preparation other than wiping off possible garden dust with a damp cloth.

Recipes are really not needed for using zucchini squash in the raw state, for the imagination will go further.

Use zucchini slices in place of cucumber in sandwiches and in salads, with thinly slivered Cheddar cheese and a touch of paprika. For an attractive salad, arrange on individual lettuce halves and serve with thick homemade low-fat yogurt topped with a sprinkle of ground sunflower seeds.

At the picnic table at home or on trips, a nutritious dip will be enjoyed with homemade wheat crackers, celery sticks or even with slender halves of zucchini squash, slightly scooped out to hold the creamy mixture.

CREAMY HALVES

¼ cup homemade low-fat yogurt
1 Tbsp. grated carrot
¼ tsp. finely chopped dill leaf
¼ cup finely diced zucchini
few grains salt

Grate carrot into creamy mixture, add zucchini as it is prepared.

Covering cut surfaces of all types of vegetables at once with either yogurt, lemon juice, or oil prevents loss of valuable vitamins. Use very little salt, since natural salts remain in uncooked vegetables.

The Creamy Dip will carry to a picnic in a rigid plastic tub with lid, or in a small glass jar with lid.

The recipe can be varied by substituting finely chopped red radishes for the carrot; or chopped parsley; or a little later when the new crop comes in, a rub of fresh garlic clove around the mixing bowl for a light blending flavor throughout the dip.

Use the same Creamy Dip without the soft margarine as a sauce with the addition of a little grated Cheddar cheese to put between thick fritters made with more zucchini squash.

ZUCCHINI FRITTERS

2 cups finely diced zucchini squash
1 tsp. finely chopped parsley
½ tsp. finely cut dill leaves
⅛ tsp. thyme
2 small eggs
2 Tbsp. wheat germ
1 Tbsp. torula yeast
few grains salt
2 Tbsp. soft margarine OR soy oil

The young zucchini is chopped or diced by any quick method you know other than grinding which loses too many nutrients and spoils the texture of the pancakes. But the pieces must be very small.

Mix in all other ingredients except the soft margarine. Add a little more flour if needed to make a dough soft enough to drop by spoonfuls.

Heat margarine in frypan gently. When bubbling, drop in four thick fritters. Brown on both sides with gentle heat so that the zucchini is partially cooked.

Whichever way you serve, there will be a tasty meal with a different flavor and texture as well as being satisfying, time-saving and money-saving.

The green-white skins of Pattypan squashes are attractive even before cooking, with their fluted edges. While perfectly tender at three-inch diameter size, they will serve to hold the squash together when filled with stuffing of some kind. Another scalloped squash is called St. Pat. This has a green skin; I have not seen this one.

STUFFED PATTYPAN

4 Pattypan Squashes, 3-inch diameter
½ cup wholewheat breadcrumbs
½ tsp. grated sweet onion
few grains dry mustard
2 Tbsp. thick homemade yogurt
2 Tbsp. grated Cheddar cheese.

Wipe skins of squashes. With sharp pointed knife, remove thin slice from each top; scoop out a small hole without breaking the skin. It should be only just a depression to hold a piled tablespoon stuffing.

Next week, because of the speed at which summer squashes develop to usable sizes, there will be more suggestions on their use — in soups, as pan-cooked quick supper dishes with other vegetables and as oven grill dishes.

Chocolate chip pancakes

1 cup pancake mix
1 cup milk
1 egg
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
6 scoops peppermint ice cream
Toasted shredded coconut

Combine mix, milk, egg and oil; mix until batter is fairly smooth. For each pancake, pour scant 1 tablespoon batter onto hot (375 degrees F.), lightly greased griddle. Sprinkle each pancake with chocolate pieces. Turn when tops are covered with bubbles and edges look cooked. Turn only once.

For each serving, place 5 to 6 pancakes on plate; top with a scoop of ice cream and toasted coconut.

Makes six servings.
